INSANE MAN SHOOT FAMILY-KILLS SELF

Wife Killed, One Son Mortally Hurt, Second Son
Attacked—Third Runs From House In
South Orange, N. J.

SOUTH ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 31.—Apparently suddenly insane, Frederick Sanborne, 49, today shot and killed his wife, Maude, mortally wounded his son Jack, 10, attacked his oldest son, Frederick, Jr., and then killed himself.

Another son, Albert, escaped his father by running from the Sanborne home, where the mad attack was staged.

Sanborne first shot the boy Jack, the bullet entering the left temple, and the boy later was reported dying at the Orange Memorial Hospital.

He then turned the gun on his wife, who has been ill. He struck her with a hammer and then attacked Frederick with the hammer. An attempt to shoot Frederick failed when the revolver missed fire. He then killed himself.

NON-PARTISAN TAX REDUCTION SYSTEM IS NOW ABANDONED

Party Leaders Cling To
Own Programs For
Tax Slice

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Hope of inaugurating a non-partisan tax reduction program in the new congress was virtually abandoned by party leaders as the house ways and means committee began public hearings on the proposed measure today.

Republican and Democratic spokesmen clung tenaciously to their own programs, with the difference in the amounts of the proposed reductions seemingly too great to be reconciled without a bitter political struggle.

The Republican program, based upon the advice of the treasury and the plans of congressional leaders, indicated an ultimate figure of $200,000,000 to $300,000,000, with corporations receiving the greatest benefit.

The Democratic program agreed upon by Senator Simmons, North Carolina, and Rep. Garner, Texas, ranking minority member of the senate and house fiscal committees, still calls for a tax cut of $400,000,000 to $500,000,000 despite the pessimistic estimates of the treasury.

More than a score of national organizations, constituting an open but powerful lobby, will send representatives before the committee in its ten days of open hearings. The plan of house leaders is to report the tax bill soon after congress meets on December 1, pass it by Christmas and send it to the senate so that it may become a law by March 15. This would make possible the application of reductions to this year's taxes.

BULLET IN BRAIN FATAL IN 11 YEARS

LANSING, Mich., Oct. 31.—Mrs. Erma Lake, 26, is dead as a result of a bullet lodging in her brain eleven years ago.

When she was fifteen, a revolver she was cleaning was discharged and the bullet entered her head, severing an optic nerve and causing total blindness. Surgeons feared an operation would prove fatal and the bullet remained.

Recently she went to the hospital, suffering with bronchial pneumonia. A coughing spell freed the bullet, causing it to press against a vital spot. Death followed.

Miss Elder Buys
New Frocks

PARIS, Oct. 31.—After the first few days of being wildly acclaimed by Paris and visiting a few of the world famous wonders of Paris, Miss Ruth Elder and George Haldeman today continued the elaborate program prepared for their brief stay at the French capital.

Today's official program, however, was scheduled to be light, as Paris was enjoying a holiday. Both Ruth and Haldeman will speak over the radio through the radio institute of Sorbonne University and in the evening will be guests at a dinner given at the home of Minister Bokanowski.

The French people, it was revealed today, are planning many honors for the fliers. The French Senate is preparing to receive them Thursday and the city of Paris wants to have them sign the gold book Friday and receive gold medals.

An official decoration for Miss Elder was asked by Commandant Weiss, noted French ace. The Archives De La Parole, or Sorbonne University, has asked for a permanent wax record of the vibrations of Miss Elder's voice, to be placed in the archives where the voices of many famous men and women are being preserved.

Ruth and Haldeman spent yesterday wandering about the boulevards and observing Paris in Sunday dress. Miss Elder was dressed in her latest French purchase, a striking black jersey kasha coat with a gray fox collar and cuffs, with a band of fox fur at the bottom. Her dress was a two piece creation of a black and white jersey blouse and black jersey kasha skirt. On her head was a jaunty black velvet hat.

Last night the fliers attended the casino De paris where they witnessed the performance of the Dolly Sisters. Ruth and Haldeman occupied a box as the guests of members of the French Aero Club.

"MONEY LOVE" STARTS TODAY

Beatrice Burton, whose name has come to be synonymous with good newspaper literature, has written another of her interesting serial stories for "The Xenia Gazette."

The story, "Money Love," is starting today on page eight as "The Lady Called Fate" comes to an interesting close. Succeeding and generous installments of the new story will be published daily.

Miss Burton seems to have that magic gift that enables her to write the sort of serial stories that newspaper readers like. She has probably been the most popular author whose serial stories have appeared in this paper for some time and for that reason, it was with pleasure that the management was able to renew the relationship with this, her latest serial.

Readers will not have to be reminded that it was Beatrice Burton who wrote "Honey Lou," "Her Man," "The Hollywood Girl" and "Sally's Shoulders," all of which were published in this paper. Her new story offers an attractive appeal for these cooler nights and those who have read it, say it is one of her best.

RESCUED TELL THRILLING YARN OF BATTLE FOR LIVES AT SEA

Nine Men Saved By Liner When Schooner Founders
—Take To Single Life Boat For
Four Days

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Four days and nights—a nightmare of toil and the pumps of their doomed schooner and then seven back-breaking days and nights in a tiny open boat, battling constantly against seepage from leaky seams, their bodies aching from salt water, thirst and hunger and the jabbering prayers of a negro cook babbling ceaselessly in their ears.

Like a page out of fiction, there came the story today of nine men of the sea, who were brought into port by their rescuers, Captain Jasobus De Koning and his crew of the liner Volendam.

Captain William D. Potter of Cambridge, leader of the rescued crew was still tired today. "I guess I'll be tired for some time yet," he said. His chief mate Gene Bradell regarded his venture with true salt water optimism. "Well, it wasn't any picnic."

Capt. Potter's schooner Horatio G. Foss, of Boston foundered October 22 after twelve days of battling storm swept seas, enroute from Philadelphia to Martinique with a cargo of coal. The captain ordered his seven men and the cook to the auxiliary motor boat, but it was necessary to throw the motor overboard in order to make room for the crew. Only after four laborious days at the schooner's pumps was the order for abandonment given.

Then began the gruelling hours in the 22-foot open boat striving to reach Bermuda, 200 miles away. The boat had sprung it seams upon touching water and constant bailing was necessary. They toiled for seven days and nights, only to sight Bermuda and then be swept thirty miles back into the heaving sea by a gathering storm.

A sixty mile gale was raging,

LINDBERGH TO HELP GUGGENHEIM FUND

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, trans-Atlantic air pioneer, will officiate in a consulting capacity for the Daniel Guggenheim fund for the promotion of aeronautics, and for the time being at least, will not align himself with any commercial project. It was learned here today.

Harry F. Guggenheim, president of the Guggenheim fund, announced that "Lindbergh" henceforth would be a member of the organization. "Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has determined that for the present, at least he will not identify himself with any commercial undertaking," Guggenheim said.

JACK DEMPSEY FIGHTS IN COURT THIS TIME

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Jack Dempsey has returned to New York to fight but not with his fists.

His opponent will be Jack Kearns, his erstwhile pal and manager, and the bout will be decided on legal points. The Blackstone code will be substituted for the Marquis of Queensbury rules and there will be no fourteen-second counts.

A federal judge will be the referee and Newark will be the scene of the battle.

Dempsey wasn't sure today just when the starting gong would ring, but thought it might be late this week. Besides the suit for $333,333-22 brought by Kearns for alleged breach of contract, the former champion will defend another brought by Teddy Hayes for back pay. Hayes was formerly Dempsey's trainer. He is still in the employ of Kearns as a trainer for Mickey Walker.

Kearns and Hayes are in Chicago where Walker boxes Mike Tigue next Wednesday night. It has been rumored that there will be a settlement out of court when Kearns returns here but Dempsey emphatically denied this.

Dempsey's fighting plans are pretty well defined. He doesn't intend to do any indoor scrapping this winter, but hopes to have two bouts next spring and summer. These, he hopes, will lead him up to a third Tigue fight.

"I still think I can lick Gene," he said.

As Dempsey settles down for a long stay in our midst Tuesday today was preparing to leave for an extended stay in the Adirondacks.

GOVERNMENT ADDS FINISHING TOUCHES TO OIL PROSECUTION

Former Senator on Stand
At Sinclair-Fall
Trial

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The finishing touches on the government's picture of fraud and corruption incident to the leasing of Teapot Dome naval oil reserve to Harry F. Sinclair by former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall were to be applied by Owen J. Roberts, Federal Prosecutor, when court convened in the conspiracy trial today.

With former Senator Charles S. Thomas, of Colorado, on the witness stand, Roberts endeavored to show the jury that Harry F. Sinclair was actively identified with the defunct Continental Trading Company, Ltd., of Canada, a morning glory concern that blossomed for a single deal.

Establishments in the minds of the jury that Sinclair was so identified is all-important to the government's case, for previously it had been shown that $230,500 in liberty bonds from the bank account of the continental found their way into Fall's hands. The government contends Sinclair directed this transfer and holds that the transaction was a bribe to induce the former cabinet officer to lease Teapot Dome.

Thomas was the attorney of the late Col. A. E. Humphreys, of Texas, who sold the Continental 33,000,000 barrels of oil. This oil was promptly resold to the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Company at a profit of twenty-five cents a barrel, the Continental not putting up a cent of cash, but taking $3,000,000 in profits. Thomas will tell the jury about the conference at which the Humphreys contract was arranged. Present were Sinclair, Col. Robert Stewart of the Standard Oil of Indiana; H. M. Blackmer, of the Midwest Refining Company, and James H. Blackmer, of the Standard Oil of Indiana.

Blackmer, according to Thomas, suggested the oil be bought in the name of the Continental Trading Company, but the attorney refused because he had never heard of such a concern. Thereupon, Sinclair, Stewart and O'Neil, in writing, guaranteed the contract. It is the signature of Sinclair, plus Thomas' remembrance of conversation at the conference, that Roberts is depending upon to link the defendant definitely with the Continental.

The defense claims that Sinclair was present as an agent of his own company, but the attorney of the Continental and that Blackmer alone represented the latter company. Blackmer is in Europe defying the government's subpoena.

BELIEVE AIR PILOT FAINTED AND PLANE CRASH KILLED FOUR

Veteran Flyer Dies With
Crew When Big Plane
Falls

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Belief that pilot Leroy Thompson, 28, of Waterbury, Conn., fainted at the controls of the new Fairchild monoplane which crashed with a death toll of four near New Brunswick, N. J., yesterday, was expressed today by officials of the Colonial Air Transportation, owners of the ship.

The tragedy occurred but a short distance from the spot where a Reynolds airplane had crashed seven persons to their deaths on September 12.

Thompson, pilot of the big ship which plunged earthward yesterday, was a veteran in the air. He also was manager of the New York branch of the Colonial company. With him in death went his fiancée, Elizabeth McGowan, 25, Newark school teacher.

Investigation was said to have revealed that the motor of the plane was roaring smoothly up to the moment that it was plunged into the earth. Witnesses questioned today said not until the plane was a few yards from the earth, did they realize it was out of control. Structurally and from a motor standpoint, it seemed to be functioning properly.

The other two victims of the crash were Wesley Hubbell, 27, Hackensack, N. J., and George Haubner, 28, Hillsdale, N. J., both telephone company employees.

MANAGER POSITIVE SUSPECT ASSISTED IN DARING HOLD-UP

Partly Identified By
Ralph Chambliss—
Returned Sunday

Roy Bartlett, 25, Clarksburg, W. Va., was positively identified Monday morning by J. A. Wipert, manager of The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., branch store at Main and West Sts., as one of two youthful bandits who held up and robbed the store the night of October 22.

Wipert and his wife were forced at the point of revolvers to hand over the day's receipts, the robbers timing the coup at the exact hour the store was closing for the night and gaining entrance on the pretext of making a purchase.

Bartlett was also partly identified by Ralph Chambliss, Cincinnati Ave., as one of the three robbers who attempted, unsuccessfully, to hold him up earlier the same evening on W. Second St. He was half convinced Bartlett was the leader of the trio.

Fred O. Lienarue, Pennsylvania Railroad detective, further completed Bartlett's identity with the hold-ups Monday when he remembered having seen him here early on the night in question.

Bartlett was returned to Xenia from Clarksburg early Sunday night by Sheriff Ohmer Tate and Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, to face a charge of robbery, filed against him in connection with the grocery store hold-up.

He did not oppose his extradition to Ohio but local officers had made the trip, prepared for such an emergency, by arming themselves with the necessary requisition papers.

Sheriff Tate obtained Governor Vio Donahay's signature to the papers last Friday, and returning to Xenia, took a train to Charleston, W. Va., accompanied by Shagin. The Ohio governor's requisition was honored by the governor of West Virginia at Charleston last Saturday.

Bartlett maintains he is innocent of both crimes. Police say he claims his ability to prove that he left the city about 8:15 that evening, or before the hold-ups took place.

Bartlett and E. H. Sayre, 26, Clarksburg, W. Va., held as a suspect, became acquainted in the state penitentiary at Moundsville, W. Va., where both served terms. The former for shooting a colored man who later attacked a white girl man who later for holdup, the records showed. Released from prison about the same time, they became companions on a motor trip West.

They passed through Xenia en route home on the day the local robberies took place. A third man had been picked up along the road. Both suspects police ignorance of his name.

Bartlett told police the three became separated in Xenia. He said he left the city for his home before the time the hold-ups were reported to have taken place.

Bartlett was transferred from the County Jail to Police Headquarters Monday morning to face victims of the two hold-ups.

Police are uncertain whether he will be arraigned on the robbery charge before Mayor John W. Prugh Monday or Tuesday. Disposition of the case of the second suspect is also uncertain.

New Boy Scout Cabin Ready For Occupancy.

DREAM REALIZED BY SCOUTS WHEN CABIN IN PARK COMPLETED

Old Scouts And Many Volunteers Get Credit For Building

The new Boy Scout cabin, located on a two-acre site, which extends the length of Shawnee Park at the northeast end, is now completed and ready for occupancy, it is announced.

Construction work was started April 4 and the building was completed October 25. It is a frame structure twenty by thirty feet, well lighted and heated by a huge, rugged fireplace. Erection of the building, which will be used as headquarters by the three local Scout troops, was made possible through organization of the Old Scouts Association a year ago and by Xenians who contributed to the Old Scout drive for funds.

Each person contributing $1 or more, became a member of this organization, and helped to make the cabin a reality.

Many individuals were active in aiding in the work of building the cabin. The building was erected through the efforts of Deputy Scout Commissioner R. H. Kingsbury, S. N. McClellan, Scoutmaster J. J. Stout and Edwin Woodward, assisted by Dr. B. E. McClellan, Asa Price, John Babler, Walter Smith, Arthur Miller, Fred Hornick, James Orr, Karl Kniesley, J. H. Nardley, E. C. Hamlin, Robert Dornay, Scoutmaster Ernest Blackburn and others.

Kingsbury is scoutmaster of Troop No. 41, Stout leads Troop No. 43 and Blackburn leads Troop No. 45.

Scouts also wish to thank Roy Croker, who loaned his truck for use in the work. The Stout Coal Co. and Arthur Miller also assisted in hauling stone for the big fireplace and chimney to the building site. Other firms which assisted in making construction of the cabin possible, include: The Wilson Engineering and Contracting Co.; Greene County Lumber Co.; McDowell and Torrence Lumber Co.; Ervin Milling Co.; and Dadds Marble Co.

Earl Short gave the use of his concrete mixer to the boys while the foundation was being poured. The Dayton Power and Light Co. is credited with a share in the project for furnishing a special line, strung to the cabin to supply electricity for lighting.

All work was voluntary on the part of skilled and unskilled individuals, who worked under the capable direction of S. N. McClellan and R. H. Kingsbury. Kingsbury and McClellan spent practically every evening and holidays during the summer months in order that the cabin could be completed for use this fall.

Regular meetings of local Scout troops are now being held in the new cabin. The boys are enthusiastic over the building and appreciate the efforts of all individuals who assisted in the work.

There are now three troops of Boy Scouts in Xenia. The order in Xenia was first organized in April, 1915 with Earl Spahr as Scoutmaster and Earl Ervin and Leigh Nisbet as assistants. Since this time, the Scouts have participated in every civic activity in which they have been needed.

During the World War, their activities included the Liberty Loan drive and savings stamp sales. Medals and bars for loan work were awarded eleven boys in the troop.

In 1918 a second troop was formed under the direction of Eagle Scout W. R. John. This troop has J. J. Stout as its present leader and has come out strongly for athletics under its able leader, Robert Adair.

Troop No. 45, organized in 1927, is in its infancy in point of years but is steadily growing under Ernest Blackburn, of the Lutheran Church.

Present Scout enrollment in Xenia is seventy-five with 100 the prospect for another year.

"So it can readily be seen that Scouting is on the map in Xenia and with a definite place for the activities available, its continued growth is assured," asserts Deputy Commissioner Kingsbury.

BRITISH AIR FORCE START FLYING BOAT STATION ON THAMES

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The Air Ministry is about to set up a commercial flying boat station on the Thames, in conjunction with the chief aviation companies.

The first service instituted will be one of the passenger flying boats across the North Sea from London to Hamburg and Copenhagen. This will be an arrangement between the Imperial Airways of England and the German Luft-Hansa.

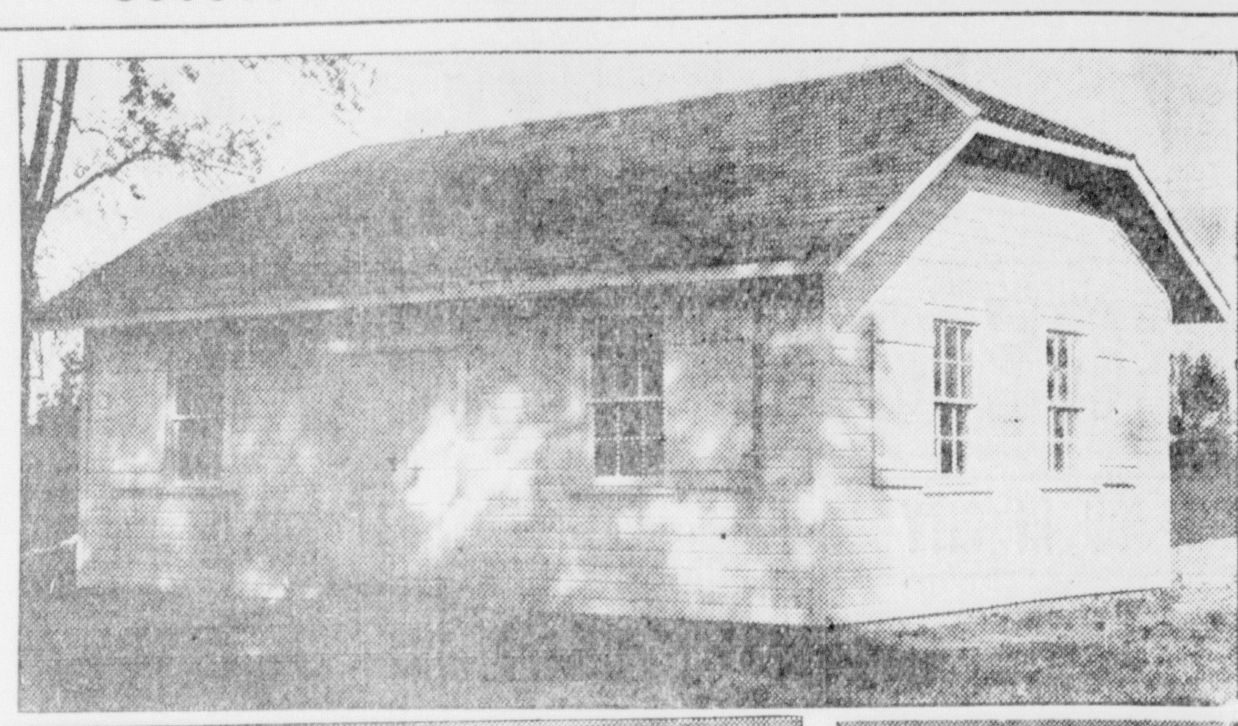

The service will be a daily one, and the type of machine likely to be used is a Dornier-Rolls-Royce all metal flying boat seating about twenty passengers.

Experts are convinced of the value of the flying boat for commercial use and are of the opinion that many business men would welcome the proposed service as a speedy method of reaching Germany and Denmark.

SUNSHINE TREATMENT

One of the most interesting days of the European trip I took last summer with a body of physicians was spent at the ROLLIER Institute at Leysin, in the Swiss Alps.

At first sight of the patients you would believe that they were all mutilated, but there was not one among them—they were simply browned by the sun.

While the use of the sun in the treatment of various diseases is very old, Dr. Rollier was the first one to work it out in a scientific manner. Dr. Rollier first used a heliotherapy (treatment by the sun) for surgical tuberculosis (this means all tuberculosis except that of the lungs)—bones, joints, lymph glands, etc. Recently pulmonary tuberculosis is being included, but that, I understand, is still in the experimental stage.

The healing rays of the sun are the ultra-violet rays, and like the X-Rays are in themselves invisible. There are many diseases besides tuberculosis that are benefited by these rays: Malnutrition, rickets, skin diseases, asthma, running ears, coughs, and, in fact, all the diseases so far as I know.

There are especially constructed machines which give off these ultra-violet rays, and in cases of disease in the ear and other passages, special tubes which permit the light to be directed into the passage are used. Many cases are miraculously cured when all other methods have failed. (The treatment with these lights must be given by a scientific operator, but they may be dangerous in unskilled hands.)

There is a chemical relationship which takes place between the ultra-violet rays and the hemoglobin or red coloring matter of the blood. It is believed that the radiant energy which the blood receives causes it to convey an increased amount of oxygen to the cells and to take away an increased amount of toxins (poisons) from them. It also helps in forming the defense or anti-bodies against disease.

The blood under their influence seems to increase its iodine, calcium and phosphorus. Possibly the rays cause a better absorption of them from the intestinal tract. There is also produced a physical increase of blood to the parts which act beneficially for some time after the light is given.

The methods in which the treatments are taken are in general as follows: The patient is exposed for

ELKS' FAIR DRAWS MANY CELEBRATORS SATURDAY NIGHT

Miss Evelyn Ary, 206 W. Main St., won the grand prize of $15 and Arthur Hyman, E. Market St., won the second prize of $10 Saturday night, when the closing celebration of the Elks' Charity Fair was held.

A floor lamp and smoking set, offered as prizes at the fair, will be given away later.

The biggest crowd of the fair filled the Elks' Club, Second and Whiteman Sts., Saturday night. The amusement booths attracted several hundred people and the dance floor was filled during the entire evening. Officers of the Elks were unable to give an estimate of the amount raised through the fair, but enough is thought to have been realized to furnish a nice Christmas treat to children of the city, this year.

Several hundred youngsters took advantage of "Kiddies' Day" at the fair Saturday afternoon. Games and amusements were furnished for the children and three prizes, a pair of shoes each, were given away. Refreshments of ice cream, candy, etc., were furnished by the lodge for the boys and girls.

Firemen were summoned and extinguished the flames with water. The damage amounted to $5.

GOOD DIGESTION NOT MATTER OF LUCK

End Indigestion without Dieting

To be free from indigestion, dyspepsia, flatulence, acidity, water-brash, heartburn or other distressing stomach "upsets" is not a matter of luck but just a matter of care. But, mark you, not care in diet either, for even the greatest stomach sufferers can eat what they fancy without disagreeable after-effects if they will only take a little "Pape's Diapepsin" to make things right with their stomachs.

Nearly all digestive trouble is due to excess acid which accumulates in the stomach causing food to ferment and painful gases to form. By instantly neutralizing this harmful acid "Pape's Diapepsin" brings prompt relief and restores to normal the disturbed digestive processes, as well as soothing, healing and strengthening the acid-weakened stomach lining.

Get a 60-cent package of "Pape's Diapepsin" from your druggist today and be free from the miseries of indigestion for good and all.

GERMANY LEADING NATIONS IN SUICIDES STATISTICS PROVE

BERLIN, Oct. 31.—Of all European nations Hungarians are most, Greeks least inclined to throw away their lives, according to the latest suicide statistics. Germany, which so far, was on the top of the list, ranks second in the new statistics, right ahead of the Czechoslovak Republic.

With the exception of Ireland and Italy, statistics show that people in Northern Europe, heavy thinkers and, as a rule, pessimists, figure most prominently in the list of self-murderers, while the natives of the sunny South seem to cling to their lives.

In the following list the total of suicides in proportion to 10,000 of population is annually: Hungary 2.7; Germany 2.6; Czechoslovakia 2.5; Switzerland 2.4; Austria 2.4; Freestate Dantzig, 2.3.

In proportion to 100,000 of population the annual total of suicides in other European countries is as follows: Sweden 1.6; Denmark 1.5; Italy 1.4; Lithuania 1.3; Spain 1.2; Ireland 1.1; Greece 1.0.

The latter list proves that suicides are almost unknown in a certain number of European countries.

CULDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu.

Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Farm Notes

CROPS DECREASE

Less corn, oats, cotton, apples, peaches, tobacco, and sugar beets; more wheat, barley, rye, buckwheat, flax, tame hay, white potatoes, grapes, and sweet potatoes. That is how production estimates for early October compare with those for the United States as a whole, according to the monthly "Economic Information Letter" sent by the rural economics department at the Ohio State University to Ohio farmers who are cooperating with that department in keeping farm records, or the like.

Chief among the changes between September and October production estimates are there. Drop in oats production estimates from a crop 4.7 per cent more than last year, to one 3.6 per cent less than last year; increase in corn crop estimates of 146 million bushels, due to warm weather in September thereby raising total crop estimate

DR. COOK ALLOWED APPEAL FROM CASE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the Arctic explorer, today won an appeal to the Supreme Court for review of a circuit court decision denying him liberty from Leavenworth Prison on a five years probation order.

No explanation accompanied the court's brief announcement of its decision to review the case. Dr. Cook's flight for freedom dates from March 17, 1927, when he fled from the Federal District Court of north Texas, after the government's objection placed him on probation and ordered his release. The district court order was reversed in the circuit court.

The explorer, who was convicted in Fort Worth, Texas, in 1923 on a charge of using the mails to defraud in an oil scheme, was sentenced to serve fourteen years and nine months in prison.

HELP FOR SICK WOMEN

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Restored the Health of Thousands

Brooklyn, New York.—Mrs. G. Hegmann of 228 Schaeffer St., was in a run-down condition and could not do her housework. She could not sleep at night. Her story is not an unusual one. Thousands of women find themselves in a similar condition at some time in their lives. "I found your advertisement in my letter box," wrote Mrs. Hegmann, "and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got relief." Mrs. Hegmann also took Lydia E. Pinkham's Herb Medicine and Lydia E. Pinkham's Pills for Constipation, with good results. She says, "I am recommending your medicines to all I know who have symptoms the same as mine, and to others whom I think it will help. You may use my statement as a testimonial, and I will answer any letters sent to me by women who would like information regarding your medicines."

There are women in your state—perhaps in your town—who have written letters similar to this one telling how much Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped them.

RESISTS ARREST BY OFFICER; IS GIVEN HEAVY FINE MONDAY

John Nieceley, 43, this city, was fined $100 and costs on a charge of drunk and disorderly conduct when he pleaded guilty before Mayor John W. Pugh Monday morning. It constituted his fourth offense, police say.

Nieceley resisted an attempt by Patrolman J. E. Craig to place him under arrest late Sunday night and the officer was compelled to use his mace to subdue him.

The officer had been assigned to answer a complaint of a woman that Nieceley had been drinking heavily and was forcing his attentions upon her against her wishes. Craig asserted Nieceley struck at him and the officer retaliated by hitting him on the head with his club. Nieceley immediately tried to escape but was overtaken by Craig after a short chase and taken to Police Headquarters.

Nieceley was not seriously hurt by the blow but a physician was summoned to bandage his head.

MAYOR'S COURT

NEEDED MORE TIME

William Burba, this city, was arrested Saturday night by Special Patrolman William Ringer on a charge of intoxication.

He was released until he could sober up, with instructions to appear in the court of Mayor John W. Pugh Monday morning.

Came Monday morning and Burba staggered into Police Headquarters on time but totally "fried" once more.

He was locked up in a cell until his condition improved sufficiently for him to be arraigned on an intoxication charge.

EXTRA POLICEMAN BOTH FAKE AND REAL

Three extra patrolmen patrolled the streets of the city Saturday night, assigned by Police Chief M. E. Graham for special duty in connection with the Halloween festivities in Xenia.

The extra officers were Jesse Dorton, Alphonsa Sanders, colored, and William Ringer.

Chief Graham also granted permission to several celebrators to impersonate policemen by masquerading in officer's uniforms and so more cops were in evidence than for many years.

Chief Graham consented to applications for permission to wear officer's uniforms, believing the apparent large number of patrolmen would have a psychological effect on mischievous children.

In addition the regular patrolmen were also on duty.

GRANTS NEW TRIAL TO CONVICTED MAN

Application of J. G. McNeil, Springfield Pike, recently convicted in Probate Court of a charge of cruel punishment of a minor, for a new trial, was granted Monday by Judge S. C. Wright, after motion for a new trial of the case was argued by opposing counsel.

Judge Wright assigned the case for a second trial Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock. The request for a new trial was based on new evidence obtained, purporting to show McNeil was not guilty of cruelty to his son, as alleged in an affidavit filed by his wife.

"LOOK FOR LORECO"

Instant starting with

"LORECO 88"

THE IDEAL WINTER-TIME GAS

at no increase in price!

ONE of the familiar sounds of the neighborhood on an autumn morning is the prolonged whine of a cold motor that is "hard to start." Many a battery is taxed to the limit while the oil in the crankcase is diluted with raw gasoline drawn into the motor by excessive choking.

The trouble is that ordinary gasoline doesn't vaporize readily enough at low temperatures.

A happy solution of the difficulty is found in "Loreco 88," so named because of its low initial boiling point—beginning to vaporize perfectly at 88 degrees.

But "Loreco 88" costs no more than ordinary gasoline. Adopt the use of "Loreco 88" with the first cold days of winter. There's a delightful surprise in store for you.

Loreco Motor Oil affords perfect lubrication in cold weather the minute your motor is started, because it is a zero cold test lubricant. Pours freely at zero temperature. Flows freely to all moving parts of the motor in coldest weather the minute you start your machine.

GLIB TONGUE AND REAL WORK

Just as prosperity and development of a country depend upon the home, so does the home depend upon operating industries, steady payrolls and sound government policies.

One of the main reasons for the good times which we have enjoyed in this country has been the willingness of capital and labor to appreciate the advantages and the necessity for maintaining, building up and encouraging the home markets.

Capital realizes that well paid and contented labor has the greatest purchasing power. It has abandoned the old notion that labor is a commodity to be purchased at the lowest price. It has adopted the idea of reducing waste, both human and material.

Labor on its part has appreciated the value of these changes. It understands that only by increased production can it secure permanently increased pay.

Neither labor nor industrial leaders in other parts of the world seem to have been able to understand these fundamental ideas which since the war, have helped strengthen the social, industrial and financial structure of the United States.

These remarkable changes have been economic and not political. They were brought about by scientific and practical men who understood the human element in production, as well as the physical machinery and markets of the world.

The problems of the world today are not political but economic. The type of administrator and executive needed in public affairs should not be taken from the ranks of those whose sole experience has been in politics and whose principal stock in trade is a glib tongue and a superficial understanding of the technique of government. The ideal administrator is a man well grounded in the history of governments. In addition, he should have an understanding of industrial problems, a broad vision in regard to economics and a knowledge of the world and its peoples. He should know the needs of the world from the standpoint of its furnishing markets for the products of American farms and industries.

In other words, the ideal administrator and executive in our public affairs is the thinker and the doer, and not merely the orator and spellbinder who has too often led political parties in days gone by.

AMUSEMENTS AND DOCTORS

"At least ten per cent of whatever income one has should be invested in pleasure," advises Elizabeth Marbury, widely known writer.

Here is some more of the advice given by this "wise woman" to working men and women, and particularly to those who sacrifice all to their jobs.

"It often costs money but amusements are not as expensive as doctors.

"How many old fashioned people refuse to spend on pleasures. They pinch and save and believe that to go to the movies, to the theatre or to listen to music is a waste of their hard earned pennies. This is bad reasoning. Relaxation is the oil which makes the wheels of life go round.

"Some enjoyment is necessary. It is the relief from tension. It is as necessary to the brain as bread is to the body.

"Nothing ages one so fast as to live in dullness. One's vitality becomes sapped, one's outlook becomes warped. Doing anything is better than doing nothing."

The Way of the World

STILL LEARNING

We are still learning about fuel. The industrial world hasn't found out nearly all it needs to know, and some day will know, about fuel. Less coal and more oil has been the later rule in industry. Now come experiments in burning powdered coal instead of oil under boilers. Experiments are successful and the cost of fuel is greatly reduced. The most important and interesting thing about the industrial revolution is that it keeps right on "revolving."

A POOR EXCUSE

When visitors in Russia comment on the poverty and general wretchedness of conditions in that country, they are told that "you should have seen Russia under the czar."

That's the kind of excuse many of us are prone to make for ourselves whenever we are in error. We seek for comfort in the fact that we are better than somebody else or that the conditions which we have brought about are not as bad as they might be. That's a lazy excuse. It shows no ambition and no heart for a better day. We ought always to be comparing our work with what it might be, with the ideal. The acceptance of the second best, because it is not so bad as something else, is a poor, weak gesture.

KEEPING THE MACHINE GOING

Seven years ago the U. S. treasury department estimated that we, the people of this country, spent 23 billion dollars a year on sports, amusements, and luxuries. The amount is doubtless greater now. Your first thought might be that this is a lot of waste. The fact is that our habit of freely spending for this sort of thing is one of the reasons for our prosperity. We keep the big manufacturing and selling machine going by our luxurious habits. We keep a multitude of work. We provide a continuance of prosperity.

WHY NOT DO IT?

Ninety per cent of 1,000 business leaders of this country have approved a new calendar. The year would consist of 13 four-week months, with an extra day left over annually and two extra days in leap year. Every week day would fall on the same date.

And why not? We muddle along with an antiquated calendar when there are good reasons for systematizing things in a convenient manner. The reason we do nothing about it is the reason that governs us in most other matters of suggested improvement. We just simply hate initial inconvenience. We would rather let well enough alone than go through the necessary motions of adjusting ourselves to something better. And that's why human progress is so slow.

The Daybook
Of A
New Yorker

By
Burton Rascoe

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—One of the most novel studios in New York is about to be opened to the public. It is in the rear of a bookshop at 65 Fourth avenue, opposite Wanamaker's store. The interior of the studio has been constructed almost entirely out of discarded packing cases, but some very beautiful cabinet making and wood carving has been put into the raw wood by the artist whose workshop it is. This young man is a Russian, Ber Coffet, is a sculptor who has worked for years at the prosaic trade of being a hatter, by day, and who has studied and toiled by night at his wood carvings and modeling. Now at last he has a studio of his own, self made, and a showing there one of the most interesting art exhibitions in New York. He has about twelve interesting pieces on display, both in bronze and marble.

Panorama of New York.—The rare, tiny orchids, like yellow butter-flies alighting, in the window of Galvin's the florist above the Ritz. The trash fellow who tries to sell every man who is escorting a woman to the theatre "red roses for the lady." He is always trailing along Forty-fourth street, both before and after the performance. What an old-fashioned idea, what an irritating hang-over from a romantic past, that of weighing a woman down with thorny flowers just before she takes her seat in the theatre. If I were a woman, I should be annoyed with any stupid male who would add further to life's complications. The young hand Raymond, Hitchcock receives, after a seemingly long absence from Broadway, when he appears as the amiable comedian in "Just Fancy" with Joseph Santley and Ivy Sawyer. In a certain speech he explains he is deeply interested in the young Santleys (they are producing the piece) because they met and married in his company, more than ten years ago. He says that Ivy Sawyer's mother had permitted her to come to America under his guardianship because she didn't know him very well. Hitchcock seems to me one of the most likable of comedians. He is droll in an intelligent manner. He is an incurable ad libber, and most of the time has the other members of the cast weak with giggles not written in by the authors of the script.

Howard Shelley, who does a Broadway publicity racket, and might reasonably be expected to take his New York as it comes, quite without criticism or question, is developing what amounts almost to a phobia on the question of skyscrapers and the terrific growth of crowded life in the city, generally. He says he didn't mind the occasional skyscraper in the Times Square and Grand Central district, but now that every corner blooms with a towering structure, the city is beginning to get on his nerves. He is oppressed by the feeling of being crowded down into nothingness by these great, hulking, unfeeling buildings. I sympathize with him. Sometimes, when I find myself swept along Broadway, in that hectic after-theatre rush that is nothing short of Bedlam, I am burdened with the same stifling sensation. There are just a few too many people in New York.

The new vehicular tunnel, about to be opened, leading from downtown New York to Jersey, under the North River, is no doubt a great institution, but if ever I need to travel Jerseyward, the ferryboat will carry me. The tunnel may be quicker and more efficient, and certainly it is a triumph of engineering, but I am all for the blowing breezes and the vicarious scents of shipping.

Does Man Choose the Girl
Nearest to Him?

I derive much quiet amusement from reading marriage license lists published in New York and other city newspapers and I never fail to find that a high percentage of those about to wed have been living near each other. Indeed, many couples give the same street address—probably the same apartment building or boarding place.

When a man is in a marrying mood he is likely to pick on the first girl he sees. If there isn't a reasonably attractive one in the same house, he may meet her next door or up the street. A painstaking statistician collected facts a few years ago to show that a man is more likely to marry a girl across the street than up the street. The idea is that they are naturally more likely to reach a nodding or chatting basis if they live where the houses face each other.

Still another man compiled hating average which show that when a couple who have been attending a co-educational college get married, there is better than an even chance that their last names begin with the same letter, or at least with letters that adjoin in the alphabet.

The explanation is simple enough. In many colleges students are seated in alphabetical order and those who sit side by side after day, have a good opportunity to get acquainted. Of course they meet plenty of others; but there is something about sitting alongside of a person with common interest such as a college

I Have Said in My Heart

By IDAH McGLONE GIBSON BRIDES

I am taking Time by the forelock today because I want to say a few words to the girl who is going to be married this month. I believe I have a right to do so, because I was married just after I left school, and left a very wonderful home with practically no training, in becoming the wife of a poor man. Yet I lived with the same husband until he stepped through the door beyond mortal ken.

While a happy marriage does not entirely depend upon the wife, being a fifty-fifty proposition, but for the first three years it is usually up to the girl.

Men have very hazy ideas about our sex because their minds are taken up so much with themselves and the great work of providing a living that they have no time and less inclination to sit down and talk things over with their wives. They do their work of every day and expect the girls they have married to do the same.

George Bernard Shaw, in his caustic manner, once said that a man's business is to get money enough to enable him to have the man, and a woman's business is to get married.

Agreeing with Mr. Shaw, one may go even a little farther. It is almost always the woman's business to make the marriage stick; consequently, if a girl is determined upon being what God designed her to be, a helpmate to her husband.

The Other Side
A short time ago I published a letter in this column under the caption, "Should She Consent?" It was from a girl who had committed the social sin, repented and was in love with a young man who begged her to marry him. The question raised was, should she confess her fault?

The following letter is from a girl whose boy friend has committed the same sin. What should be her attitude?

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I have been going with a boy for some time, and think quite a lot of him, but this boy is in trouble with a girl several years younger than he is, and he is under a large bond, and I will probably go to the pen. Now, Mrs. Lee, do you think that I should go on and talk about me? This boy says that he loves me, but do you suppose he loves this other girl? Sometimes I think that he does, and I know that this little girl still loves him."

"TROUBLED JANE"

Your letter is a little ambiguous, Jane. Why doesn't this boy marry the girl he got into trouble with?

class that makes it easy to form a habit. I haven't tried to prove anything here. Yet the facts do indicate that marriage is still a little like drawing a number out of a hat. It depends largely on chance. Possibly it would be far better if people did more shopping about before making up their minds.

THE GREAT HUMAN PUZZLE

Household Hints
BY MRS. MARY MORTON

Most of us speak reproachfully of the housewife who serves her family a delicatessen meal. It is necessary once in awhile however, and if it is tastefully served and the articles well chosen, it may not be such a bad meal after all. Here is suggested a menu the different foods for which may be purchased on the way home from business or club.

Sliced Ham
Baked Beans or Spaghetti
Pickles
Baked Apples or Canned Fruit
Cookies

Potato Salad
Chili Sauce
Coffee

Today's Recipes
To prepare the meal in record time the beans or spaghetti should be opened and the contents put on to heat. The coffee should be made and put on to "perk" or boil. The baked apples or canned fruit—if your delicatessen does not have the apples—should be chilled in the ice box, the meat arranged on a platter and surrounded by the salad and pickles. Set the table, cut the bread and serve.

Suggestions
Marmalade Toast
Take slices of bread, spread with butter and orange and lemon marmalade. Put together and toast on both sides.

Obstinate Stopper
To remove an obstinate stopper from a glass bottle dip a piece of woolen cloth into boiling water and wrap it tightly about the neck of the bottle. In a few minutes the stopper can be removed.

Mincing Suet
One can mince a pound of suet in a few minutes if the following method is adopted: Pick all the meat from the skin, then sprinkle with flour on a baking board and roll flat. Lift the flattened piece of suet and rub it between flour-covered hands and it will break down into powder.

Removing Varnish, Paint
Varnish and paint stains in coarse fabrics may be removed by first saturating them with turpentine and then washing.

Hungarian Goulash
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)

One pound beef, one pound veal, cut in squares. Four onions, fry brown, take out and put in meat and brown. Put in casserole with two teaspoons paprika, salt to taste, water to cover. Cook one and one-half hours. Four potatoes, four carrots, two turnips, fry in grease until partly done, add to casserole. Two green peppers chopped, three tablespoons flour dissolved in water. Add water to cover, cook one hour more.

King Vidor, the director who started the film world with "The Big Parade," will direct Marion Davies in her next.

George Bancroft's initial starring vehicle will be "Victory," written by the late Joseph Conrad.

the young man to prove that he is worthy. He should have a frank talk with your parents—if he really loves you and wants to marry you—find out what are their objections to him, and ask them to let him prove he is worthy. Of course, it may be possible that your parents have grounds for their objection and realize the boy would never make you a good husband. Try to find out the truth before you break your heart over him.

Behind The Scenes
In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—No body possibly could have imagined, as lately as a month ago, that Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas would be mentioned seriously as presidential possibility.

Almost anybody, in jotting down a list of Republican eligibles, would have included Curtis' name—but only as a theoretical possibility. He's his party's leader in the upper house of congress on everything. He's consulted, on everything. He'd have been included as an "honorary" possibility, but he certainly wouldn't have been considered an "active" one—until so much talk of a "western man" started.

Today—well, without going so far as to say he's a pronounced possibility even yet, he's jumped a good many grades upward on the possibility roll.

The idea is, if this "western revolt" really is as formidable as some folks think it is, maybe Curtis could be fixed up as a compromise candidate, and a regular party split avoided.

He's a dyed-in-the-wool "organization" politician. For "regularity" he can't be beaten. He's of the "old guard," first, last and forever. He's a conservative. "Safe and sane" would be his middle name, if he had any. A radical streak in Curtis' make-up is unthinkable.

Yet he's a westerner—Kansas is "out west"—there's no getting away from it.

Curtis also has done a thing or two that even the western insurgents had to look on with a certain amount of favor.

The "old guard," he it remembered, never was strong for President Coolidge, but simply made the best of him because it couldn't help it. He stuck in "that New England crowd," which the "old guard" always resented—and put the skids under, too, as often as possible, as witness the fact that Coolidge's buddy, William M. Butler, invariably was found "holding the sack" whenever the president tried to do anything for him.

In a quiet way, a number of those old "wheel horses" have spiked a good many Coolidge policies in the last three years, and

Curtis has done his fair share of it, which, of course, was highly gratifying to the "anti-everything" element.

Again, in 1926, Curtis and a few other old-timers, going out of their home states to be re-elected, handled their campaigns in a way to amount to open repudiation of almost everything Coolidge-istic.

Curtis, for instance, declared for the McNary-Haugen brand of farm relief, in defiance of the president and the "down-easters" generally.

All this went a long distance toward taking the curse off his ultra-conservatism, as the political insurgents regard him. They still feel that he's pretty backward—and yet, perhaps, an individual who can be negotiated with.

At any rate, when the western "radicals" began to throw a scare into the conservatives' rank, and one of the latter suggested—

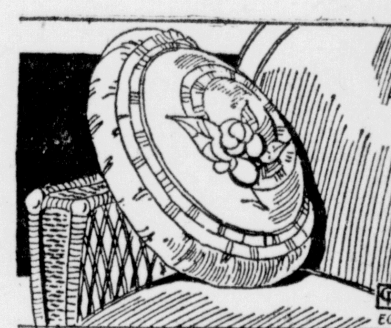

"You fellows know, of course, that we couldn't stand for Norris any more than you'd agree to J. P. Morgan, but how about Curtis?"—the "radicals" attitude was—

"H-m-m-m—well—it's worth thinking about."

To be sure, at 67, Curtis is too old, but nobody pays any attention to that this campaign.

He was quite a strong vice presidential candidate in 1924.

He isn't nominated in 1928, by a long shot, but his prospect's 20 per cent better than it was last September.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

What Constitutes the Beautiful Back and How to Acquire It

Your backbone is truly the "backbone of beauty"—it is the basis of a beautiful figure, and the great nerve center that radiates energy to every part of your body. I am not going to deal very much today with the flesh and skin on your back, but rather on the structure itself.

I wish you could get a mental picture of your backbone. You should look carefully at a medical chart or physical culture chart which shows you just how the spine should look. Then call that picture to mind whenever you are attempting to improve your own figure.

The spinal column is a beautiful thing in itself, made of a sequence of little round bones, loosely joined with muscular tissue, almost like a string of beads. It is not meant to be perfectly straight. One of the things artists love is the gentle curving of the spinal column. There should be three shallow curves to the back, none ever more than an inch deep. They are forward at the neck, backward at the shoulders, and forward again at the waistline, and out again over sacrum.

If the spine is allowed to curve too much at any one of these places the whole body is thrown out of its normal, healthful and beautiful alignment. Usually where the curve goes too deep at one of the points, a corresponding curvature appears at one or both of the others in order to bring the body into balance. So when you see a woman whose head is carried too far forward, usually her shoulder line is back too far and she has to keep a "lumbar" curve, or depression at the waistline. As the first two curves mentioned were really taken up in the talks I gave on the neck and shoulders, I am going to lay special stress today on the lumbar curves.

When you have a depression in the lumbar region of your back, you usually have a doubly difficult job in keeping your abdomen flat. One of the best exercises for lessening the lumbar curve is this: Bend forward as far as you can, without bending your knees, and allow your arms to fall loosely in front of you. Feel as if you were arching your back and relax in every other part of your body, then raise up again slowly with your attention concentrated on the middle of your back, keeping it free from the inward curve, to an upright position. Make an effort to hold this position while you are walking or working or sitting down. If you have any pain in this region, or any particular difficulty, you should lose no time seeing your physician. Osteopathy is often effective in such cases.

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent.

On the Back of a Bucking Bat
No sooner had Peter taken his seat upon her soft, fat, furry back than Mrs. Flittermouse took to her wings, and so suddenly that the boy very nearly lost his balance.

Whish! Off to the right, Swish! To the left! Flip, flap! Up into the air! Flop! Down toward earth again. Twitch! A sudden stop half way between tree tops and the ground, and now, but for a moment only, right straight ahead!

"I've heard about a bucking bronco, but I'll bet a cookie he is no harder to ride than a flying bat. It's lucky for me that her wings are so wide or I'd never keep my seat," muttered Peter, as Mrs. Flittermouse jerked her way through the moonlit sky. "Good gracious, how ever does Mrs. Flittermouse know where she is going? I can't notice that the lady keeps to any course that she is going to! I should think by this time, with all her twists and turns and stops, she would have forgotten where she started for. Hey! Look out! Tree ahead!"

Peter cried out in alarm and braced himself for a crash against the tree's trunk. But nothing happened. So Peter straightened up and heaved a sigh of relief, as Mrs. Flittermouse skimmed by a white birch without so much as touching it with the tip of her wing, although between it and the bark one could scarcely have squeezed a feather.

"Don't see how you managed that, little lady," cried the boy. "Good work, but I thought you were going to dash out your brains against that tree! Ooooh!" In spite of the first escape Peter couldn't see how Mrs. Flittermouse could possibly avoid being caught in the prickly branch of a wild pear tree just ahead. He closed his eyes. Poor Mrs. Flittermouse! If nothing worse happened she was going to have a great gap torn in her left wing. He waited for a cry of pain. None came. Mrs. Flittermouse never even uttered a squeak. Peter opened his eyes. The prickly pear tree was behind them. His clever aeroplane had taken a spiral dip, and just in time.

COLUMBUS ATHLETICS DEFEAT HUNTINGTON TEAM HERE SUNDAY

Capital City Team Led By Os Cunnigan Outplays West Virginians In All Departments—Os Flashes With Long Run

Columbus Athletics won the mythical Mid-Western gridiron championship among professional colored eleven for 1927 by defeating the Huntington, W. Va., Quicksteps handsily 19 to 0 in the third and deciding game of the season Sunday afternoon at Washington Park.

Prior to Sunday's battle, each team held one victory over the other.

Columbus counted two touchdowns in the second quarter and a third in the final period.

The Athletics registered seven first downs and presented such a tight defense that Huntington made but one first down during the contest.

Touchdowns were made by Captain Chapman, Halfback Cunnigan and Anderson, right end.

MANY UPSETS TAKE PLACE ON FOOTBALL FIELDS SATURDAY

Notre Dame-Minnesota Contest Next Big Game Of Season

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—While mid-west football fans were still talking excitedly in strange tongues over Saturday's "surprising upsets," less emotional coaches and players today were outlining the strategy that will lead this weekend to greater glory or to more "surprising upsets."

If a tonic to stimulate enthusiasm over next Saturday's card is needed one has only to consider the Notre Dame-Minnesota encounter which is scheduled for Soldiers' Field, Chicago. Neither team has been beaten. They are perhaps the two most powerful eleven in the Midwest.

Further, it's a "grudge fight." Rockne's special meat is any Big Ten conference team. Impolite laughter would be heard the length and breadth of the conference if one of its number should beat Notre Dame. The Irish trimmed the Gophers last year, 19 to 7, but not until several on each side had been laid low.

There is Minnesota with its Joe and Alphonse; Notre Dame with its Flanagan and Collins. They all remember last year's game and they will be in there this Saturday. Minnesota is tied with Illinois for the Big Ten lead; Rockne and his Irish have their eyes on a national title.

The elimination of Michigan by Illinois, the victory of Notre Dame over Georgia Tech and the routing of Stagg's confident Chicago Maroons at the hands of Ohio State, were the high spots of Saturday's results in the midwest.

The Wolverines had not been scored on until Bob Zuppke unleashed his smartly-trained Illinois upon them. Illinois must now be rated as a potential conference winner, although Zuppke still has Iowa, Chicago and Ohio State to play, a tough schedule for any team.

Illinois and Minnesota are the only undefeated conference teams to date. Minnesota beat Wisconsin Saturday 13 to 7. Chicago went the way of Michigan when the dissection-torn Ohio State troupe finally began running in the same direction and put over a 13 to 7 score.

Chicago had scored a second touchdown, but the referee ruled a Maroon back had got in motion too soon and the tally was disallowed. It was Chicago's first conference defeat.

Georgia Tech's Golden Tornado, with dreams of national recognition following a victory over Alabama, last year's southern champions, blew itself out against Rockne's Irish wall at Notre Dame. The final score was 26 to 7.

Missouri's rambling eleven, now heading the pack in the Missouri Valley conference, stopped over in Evanston long enough to paste Northwestern, 34 to 19. The "show-me" boys flashed one of the prettiest passing attacks seen here this season.

Iowa and Purdue also played non-conference opponents. After Denver had held Iowa for three periods, the mountaineers' line weakened and Armil cracked through in the final period for a pair of touchdowns. Purdue, with its sometimes-great Ralph "Pest" Welch, got going against Montana and finished on the heavy end of 39 to 7.

Nebraska surprised, not so much by the result as the size of the score, by winning an intersectional tilt with Syracuse, 21 to 0. Many experts had picked the easterners to win.

Detroit ran through Michigan state, 24 to 7; Kansas nosed out Drake 7 to 6, and Iowa state crushed the Kansas Aggies, 12 to 7.

Three Big Ten conference games are scheduled for this Saturday: Illinois at Iowa, Michigan at Chicago and Northwestern at Purdue. Ohio State travels to Princeton, Wisconsin plays Grinnell and Michigan State tackles Indiana.

GRIDDERS ENJOY BIG TEN CONTEST

Fifteen members of the O. S. and S. O. Home football squad, accompanied by Coach Roy Insley, with guests at Columbus Saturday as guests of Am Le Vulture No. 15, Columbus, and Greene County Vulture No. 140, Forty and Eight Society.

The trip was made in automobiles furnished by members of the local Vulture and the Greene County Auto Club.

Features of the trip included a tour of the university, the football stadium and dinner at Ohio Union.

The holiday was provided as a reward for victories on the gridiron this season, which include triumphs over Cedarville and Beavercreek High Schools.

CEDARVILLE BATTLES EARLHAM TO 13 TO 13 TIE ON SATURDAY

Cedarville and Earlham College football teams battled to a 13 to 13 tie at Richmond, Ind. Saturday afternoon in a colorful contest replete with interesting moments.

Cedarville was off to an early lead, counting one touchdown in the second quarter. The extra point was missed. Smith ripped the opposing line to shreds to make this marker.

Earlham came back strong toward the end of the first half, registering a touchdown on a desperate passing attack. One long heave was completed for fifty yards and a short pass over the goal line completed the march. The goal kick was good.

The third period was scoreless for both teams but Cedarville was ahead in the fourth quarter. Adair, a "marker" after a march down the field. Straight football methods were used.

A long forward pass was instrumental in the scoring of Earlham's final center in the last period, but the goal kick failed and the game ended with no decision.

Adair, bearing the brunt of a last-minute attack ran around end for twenty-five yards and a touchdown in the last three minutes of play, but the score was not allowed as a Cedarville player had been detected holding on the play. A penalty resulted and the opportunity to win was lost. Prior to his sensational dash, Adair had advanced the ball two-thirds the length of the field, practically single-handed.

The "Yellow Jackets" will play their first and only home game of the season Tuesday afternoon, meeting Antioch College. Cedarville beat Antioch's Division A team 38 to 0 earlier in the year but expects to encounter stiff opposition against the Division B eleven.

Two other games are scheduled for Cedarville this week. Local

EAST HIGH DEFEATS COVINGTON ELEVEN HERE ON SATURDAY

East High School gridders kept intact their unbroken string of football victories this season by defeating Covington High School, of Covington, Ky., 13 to 7 in a well-played game at Cox Memorial Athletic Field Saturday afternoon.

East High's scoring was confined to the first quarter while the visitors counted a touchdown in the second period.

Smith scored the Green and Whites' first touchdown after a series of line plays. The second quarter was not long in coming. A short pass, Hamilton to Buford, was completed, the latter racing fifty-five yards for a touchdown.

Brud Hurst also played a sensational game at half for East High. He averaged thirty yards in returning punts. Both teams presented a tight defense. Grant High's quarterback was the outstanding star of the visiting team.

Ideal weather prevailed for the contest, which was witnessed by a good crowd.

MAY SETTLE SUIT AGAINST HORNSBY

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 31.—Indications the suit of Frank L. Moore, betting commissioner, against Rogers Hornsby for $92,000 Moore claims is owed by him by the former manager of the Cardinals, would be settled out of court were seen today when the case was continued by agreement until Dec. 19.

The case is the outgrowth of numerous horse race betting transactions made by Hornsby and Moore, according to the betting commissioner.

No matter what you think of five-cent cigars in general, read the news about this one. A five-cent piece will decide all arguments as to whether a good cigar can be made to sell at 5c. One five-cent piece! Any smoking man can afford that much to get the low-down.

Take your nickel to your favorite cigar counter and ask for Havana Ribbon. Judge it as you would a higher-priced cigar. See how it holds up in flavor, aroma, body, the satisfying quality of ripe tobacco. You'd never believe such a cigar could be made to sell at five cents.

There are good reasons. Havana Ribbon sold at more for years. Smokers flocked to the cigar because of its quality, not its cost. So we cut the price and improved the cigar. No wonder it sells by the million! Don't be afraid of Havana Ribbon because it costs so little. Try just one and you're all set on this smoke for life.

WILBERFORCE WINS FROM KNOXVILLE IN LAST PERIOD SPURT

Heavily outweighed and handicapped by the absence of at least three regulars from the lineup, Wilberforce University succeeded in remaining in the ranks of the undefeated colored colleges this season by registering a 14 to 0 victory over Knoxville College in an inter-sectional football game at Knoxville, Tenn., Saturday afternoon.

The opening half was scoreless but Wilberforce broke the ice by counting a touchdown in the third period, inasmuch as the rather light Wilberforce backfield was unable to make much headway through the heavy Knoxville line. Tynes, giant tackle, was switched to a backfield position.

With Tynes leading the assault, Wilberforce marched half the length of the field for its first touchdown. Harding place kicked the goal.

Wilberforce's final marker in the fourth period was achieved in a fluky manner. After pushing the pigskin into Knoxville territory, a Wilberforce pass was partially intercepted by a Knoxville player, who juggled the ball. The ball bounced into the air and another Knoxville man made a stab for it, also juggling it.

The pigskin finally landed in the hands of Campbell, Wilberforce back, who ran the remaining five yards for a touchdown. Harding kicked goal.

Wilberforce was without the services of Moore, regular backfield man, who was ineligible because of scholastic difficulties. Nixon, first string guard, was out with water on the knee while Mendenhall, end, was on the sick list.

Wilberforce will meet its traditional opponent, Howard University at Washington, D. C. next Saturday.

Chapter 1.

At 10 o'clock on a stormy March morning last year Lily Lexington opened her eyes upon a world that had always been wonderfully kind to her.

All her life it had treated her like the spoiled child of Fortune that she was.

It had coddled her and pampered her, and had granted every wish and every whim that she had ever had. Every one!

And now, at 22, Lily was discontented and restless and unhappy. She was exactly like a child who has had "too much Christmas." Too much candy, too many toys, too much fun and excitement.

She looked like a spoiled child, too, on this particular March morning with her gray-green eyes full of sleep, her mouth a sulky, velvet bow, her golden-brown hair a curly, tousled mass above a frowning forehead.

"Oh, dear!" she yawned, stretched herself, and sighed deeply. In that unhappy sigh was all her dissatisfaction with life in general.

Then she held up her left hand and looked at the large diamond that decorated her engagement finger. Her frown deepened. The corners of her mouth drooped unhappily. "Oh, dear!" she sighed once more, turning the glittering thing slowly upon her finger.

She sat up in bed the door of the room opened slowly and her mother poked her head into the opening. It was a very imposing head, crowned with iron-gray hair, dressed in a high pompadour.

"You're awake, Lily?" Mrs. Lexington's voice was rich and full, but it had a note of sharpness in it just as her full, rich, ivy-colored face had a sharp look about it sometimes.

She was tall and heavy, but she moved with a surprising swiftness. Her pink linen house-dress crackled like paper, some keys in her pocket jingled, and her heels clicked on the polished floor as she went round the room pulling up the shades, putting down the windows, and lighting the gas logs in the grate.

She was as full of energy as an electric fan.

"Let me see your ring again, Lily," she said, pulling up a chair to the side of the bed. Her eyes warmed as she looked at it, and then at her daughter's lovely, sulky face.

"I've always wanted you to marry Staley Drummond. His ring is just like mine—substantial and good. It must weigh all of three karats, Lily, that diamond!"

"Three karats!" the girl repeated, lifelessly, and from her tone she might have been saying "carrots" instead of "karats."

Somewhere in the big, comfortable house a bell rang shrilly, and her eyes went to the gilt telephone that stood on the table beside her bed.

"If that's Staley, tell him I'm asleep, Mother," she said quickly. "Tell him I'll be home this afternoon as 5 if he wants to see me."

Her mother stared at her. "But, dear, he probably wants to see you now, on this way down town!" she said with a cold, sprightly air. "He's been engaged to you less than 12 hours, and naturally—"

"You heard what I said!" Lily interrupted, and her lips came together with a snap. She dropped back upon her pillows and turned her brilliant gaze upon the ceiling.

It was Staley Drummond on the telephone and Mrs. Lexington gave him Lily's message.

Staley was going on this afternoon. Staley told him in her very best voice. "But she'll be home at 5 and she wants you to stay for dinner. . . Good-bye."

"What did you tell him that for?" asked Lily, when her mother had hung up the receiver. "If I'd wanted him to stay for dinner I'd have told you so, wouldn't I?" She was scowling now like a beautiful cross baby.

Mrs. Lexington shrugged her shoulders. "You're going to eat dinner with him all the rest of your life," she pointed out, sensibly. "You're engaged to him and you're going to marry him the first of June, so you told me last night. You care for him, don't you?"

Lily groaned. "Yes, but that's no reason why I have to eat every meal with him from now on, is it?" she asked, and yawned again behind fingers that were like bits of carved ivory.

"Jimmie! I've seen the man every day for weeks. I'm tired of looking at him!" She shut her fringed eyelids to show how tired she was.

"I'll have my coffee now, please," she said.

Her mother studied her for a full minute before she got up from her chair beside the bed. Then she shook her handsome head.

"Well, I give you up, Lily!" she declared then. "Here you are engaged to marry a man who can give you everything worth while in life—and you're as indifferent about him as you can be! Any other girl in this town would give her eye-teeth to be wearing that ring on your finger this morning. I'm sure I don't understand you at all. I thought you'd like me to ask him here for dinner."

Still shaking her head, she went out of the room and down the stairs for the coffee tray.

Lily lay perfectly still, staring up at the ceiling.

She wasn't at all sure that she understood herself this morning. Last night she had been filled with triumph and happiness when she had walked into the house with Staley Drummond's kiss on her mouth and his diamond upon her finger. For months and months she had been trying to get him to the "sticking point"—the point of proposing marriage to her.

"He'll never do it," her best friend, Susan Cain, had told her in their heart-to-heart talks. "Staley's almost 40—and a bachelor as old as that is as slippery as a cake of wet soap."

But he had done it! Last night on the way home from Sue Cain's house he had asked her to marry him, and before she had had time to say "Yes" he had taken her in his arms and slipped the ring over her finger.

Looking back upon it now, it seemed to Lily that he had been too sure of her. Too sure that she would say "Yes" and fall into his arms. Too sure that she wanted him and all the things that he could give her.

"But am I sure of myself?" she thought, her eyes on the gray, slanting rain outside the window. "I'm going to marry him right enough, but do I really love him the way I should?"

She wondered. She liked him, of course. No one could help liking Staley Drummond, with his quick, friendly smile, his nice eyes and pleasant face, his generosity and his good nature. He was just as attractive as a man could be, aside from the glamour that his money gave him. And yet—

"What is it I want?" Lily asked herself. "There's nothing he can't give me."

Without realizing it, that was the way she always summed up people from the viewpoint of what they had to offer her. What could this one give her? And she liked or disliked them accordingly.

For instance: she liked Sue Cain better than any of the rest of her girl friends because Sue had the largest house and a car of her own. Because she gave more parties than anyone else, and because she knew more men.

A girl couldn't have a more useful friend than Sue Cain. Then Lily loved her father and mother because they managed, somehow or other, to give her all the things that she wanted.

She knew that they denied themselves in order to buy her beautiful clothes and matinee tickets and to keep her little imported handbag filled with money for luncheons downtown and for bridge debts and fresh white gardenias to wear on her shoulder.

She loved them because they were her father and mother, too, of course. . . But then, that was only natural.

The door opened and Mrs. Lexington came in with the tray of coffee and orange juice. She set it on the bedside table beside the gilt telephone and the gilt clock and the hand mirror.

She stopped dead still and stared at him.

Then she settled herself down by the window with a mending basket filled with chiffon stockings and soft silk underthings. She always mended Lily's clothes with her own hands.

The Cyrus Lexingtons had no upstairs maid to keep the bedrooms in order and do the darning and patching. For Mrs. Lexington figured that she could do that work herself without anyone being the wiser.

She was one of those women who can make one dollar do the work of two, just as she could make one servant do the work of two in her house. She was a hard-task mistress, but she was an excellent manager; and everyone thought that the Lexingtons had twice as much money as they really did have—which was exactly what Mrs. Lexington wanted everyone to think.

If there was turkey on the table when people came for dinner, there would be corned-beef hash for the cook and the housemaid in the kitchen.

If she paid a hundred dollars for a dress, she wore cheap muslin princess slips under it. And if she always wore white kid gloves on her large, capable hands, they were the washable sort that last forever and do not cost much to begin with. She was all for "show."

For five years she had been telling her beautiful daughter that she wanted her to marry the man she loved when it came time for her to be married.

"But," she had always added, "it's just as easy to fall in love with a rich man as it is to fall in love with a poor man. That's just common-sense, Lily."

And now that Lily had done that very thing, she was much pleased. Her handsome blond face wore a satisfied look as she rocked in her chair this morning and ran her needle in and out of Lily's gauzy silk stockings.

"I'm so glad we didn't sell the house last year when your father wanted to," she said comfortingly. "I've always dreamed of you coming down the stairs in your white satin wedding dress and your veil. . . We'll have the house decorated with yellow roses and smilax for your wedding, Lily, and have a little altar in the alcove off the living room."

Lily nodded over her glass of orange juice, and a gleam of interest came into her big gray eyes. . . She could see herself, all in white, coming down the wide stairs next June.

"And she can wear yellow chiffon," she answered eagerly. "I think I'll run over to her house this morning and tell her I want her for my maid of honor. She'll drop dead when she finds out that Staley did ask me to marry him after all. She was so sure that he was a confirmed bachelor!"

She jumped up, slipped into a wadded silk robe, and went into the bathroom to turn on the water in the tub. Above the rush and roar of it, as it came pouring from the faucets, she heard her mother's voice telling her again how lucky she was to be engaged to a man like Staley Drummond.

The only automobile that the Lexingtons owned was a large dark-blue limousine.

Every morning Mrs. Lexington drove her husband down to his law office in it and then drove it home so that she and Lily could use it if they wanted to.

QUART OF WATER CLEANS KIDNEYS

Take a Little Salts If Your Back Hurts, or Bladder Is Troubling You

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may be fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with silica, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.

Over across the desert and high overhead in the velvet sky shone the stars, the golden stars.

during the day.

It was standing in the garage on this wet and windy March morning when Lily went downstairs. She stood in the window of the sunroom looking at it for a minute as she buttoned her gloves. Then she shook her head. . . She would walk the three miles to Sue Cain's house. She was tired and pale, and the wind would whip some genuine color into her rouged cheeks and put some life into her body, she told herself. There was no beautifier like a windy spring day.

"You're surely not going to walk on a day like this!" her mother called to her from the head of the stairs as she opened the vestibule door.

Lily glanced up at her and nodded. "Do me good," she said, shortly.

"But you'll ruin your clothes!" "No, I won't—and what if I do?" The girl laughed. It was a careless sound, even if there was nothing light-hearted in it. "I'll never be able to wear out all my clothes before June, Mother, and after that—"

Her words were swallowed in the wind. The door closed behind her.

"And after that," she said to herself, starting down the wet shining sidewalks on slender arched feet in the thinness of kid pumps. "I'll have everything I want."

Everything she wanted and yet she felt that she was being cheated of something that she ought to have. Something important. Something worthwhile. What it was she didn't know, but she missed it anyway.

And Lily hated to miss anything!

Sue Cain was not at home. "She's gone down town for lunch," the old colored house man who opened the door of the Italian villa where the Cains lived, said.

So Lily swung around on the heels of her wet slippers and set off through the misty rain once more to the street car line.

It was half past one when she reached the busy downtown district, with the lights shining in the shop-windows and the people rushing about under their dripping umbrellas, jostling each other in their hurry to get to shelter from the rain.

The smartest restaurant in town was the Park Lane, at the corner of Albermarle street and Magnolia avenue. Lily and Sue always had lunch there when they were shopping or going to a matinee or a beauty shop.

Industry turns to Long Distance

WITH the adoption of new and faster operating methods in handling long distance calls, the telephone is of greater value than ever to industry.

Now, business men can conduct out-of-town affairs by telephone just as easily as they talk to associates in the same building, and with the same facility that they call other business men in the same city.

The subscriber simply asks for long distance and then gives the operator the place and number wanted. While he waits on the line, the operator makes the connection. In most cases the speed is comparable to that of a local call.

Since this service is available to any place having long distance connection, the whole nation is brought within almost immediate reach of the business man.

To get the number of an out-of-town telephone, ask for Information.

CHAPTER FORTY-TWO

The latter, after a quick glance around the room, leaned against the wall and nodded to John. "Don't let me interrupt," he said.

John Moore turned to Rodriguez. "Why did Henshaw kill Clench?" he asked.

Rodriguez shrugged, his sulky face scowling at the floor. "How do I know he killed him?" he muttered. "Then you can tell what you do know to the police!"

The heavy-lidded eyes lifted. "The police can't touch me!" he said insolently. "I did not kill them, and anyway, they were killed in Mexico."

"The police," said John Moore deliberately, "can and will hold you in prison until your own government hears of these puns you are buying, unless—" he paused. "Unless we can arrange this affair to my entire satisfaction, out of court."

It was Poker-Face Moore speaking and it was Morton who answered. "Speak up, Rodriguez."

"Why," demanded John again, "did Henshaw kill Clench?"

Rodriguez eyes shifted to the white-clad bride and back to John. "Because Clench—tried to tell about her."

Five men moved forward. "Wait!" said John Moore. "What about her?"

"What he was going to do with her."

"Ruth," began John. "No, no!" cried Ruth. "I must know. Oh, don't you see!"

"Let her stay, Joe!" exclaimed Stuart, Long, and John, glancing quickly in his direction, nodded acquiescence.

"What did Henshaw plan?" And when?

"To take the Senorita away that night."

"Where?" asked John, sharply.

"But Stuart spoke only to the fact that Joe and Joe were asleep last night. Beechy and I took some gas to a car on the Sasabe road. It was your uncle with a chauffeur and the other guy Joe shot in the arm. We started the two Mexicans walking back to Mexico, and I arrested you uncle—I'm a deputy sheriff. Beechy dropped off in Arivaca in case the rest of the gang turned up, and I picked up the two men we'd left on guard while we were gone and started for Tucson."

"Beechy didn't tell us!" exclaimed the girl.

"I know. We decided on that before I left. We didn't know just what would happen, and we didn't want you to worry any more than you had to."

"Where—there is he now?"

"I'm coming to that. At Amado I sent back word by Juan for you all to come on into Tucson."

"And you—?"

"Yes. Your uncle had been out of his head or he wouldn't have hurt anyone—we all know that. Why, sure we do. We've been his friends for years. Well, just about the time we were meeting Tucson he began to realize, I guess, what he'd done. And it knocked him all out. And—well, look Ruth, he did the only thing a decent man could do—if he came to—and found he'd killed two men. He killed himself."

There was not a sound in that room. Every man was watching the girl. John stared as if to her; but Beechy's hand clasped like a vise on his arm.

Then Ruth spoke to Stuart. "He is dead?"

"Yes."

"And—he killed himself—because he realized—what he'd done?"

"Absolutely," said Stuart, steadily. "Then he wasn't as vile as that man said."

"No, of course he wasn't."

"Oh, thank God!" She turned to John. "You see? You think that, too?"

"Of course," said John Moore as steadily as Stuart had. But when he would have approached her she held up her hand. "Let me tell Stuart, what I want done—about him, will you? Stew will do it. And then we need not refer to him again for a long, long time? Could we do that? Could we?"

"We can do everything you wish to, girl. Tell Stew if you like. He'll do it."

Ruth and Stuart walked to the window of the big room and John Moore turned to Beechy.

"Well!" said the latter, noncommittally.

John Moore stared at him. "Listen," he said. "If I'd hunted the world over, Beechy, I doubt if I could have found a man less likely to suffer remorse and commit suicide—"

Beechy chuckled. "Suicide!" he said, softly, admiringly. "Stew's a poet!"

"Ah!" said John Moore. "Then it wasn't?"

"In a way it was. This side of Amado he did grab a gun from Richy—but Stew shot first. Stew usually does. When criminals get gay with Stew, the deputy sheriff—you might call it suicide."

"I guessed it was something like that," said John.

"But Ruth mustn't!"

"Never! But we are both deeply indebted to him!"

"O rot!" said Beechy. "The thing he did was his business to do. The suicide part was a wedding present to Ruth."

Morton had approached. "Poker-Face, what do you want me to do?"

"My name is Moore—with Mr. before it when you speak to me."

"That's all right, Mr. Moore," said Morton. "Of course the—ah, the little gun deal is off with Henshaw dead."

"Or alive," said John shortly.

"But look, Mr. Moore—I didn't know that Miss Henshaw was what she is. Henshaw sent me her picture. I've got letters where he says—"

"You'll forget what he said. And I don't want to hear. Those letters will be sent to me at the Engineers Club this week—or you'll hear from some letters I brought up from Mexico. However, I owe you a lot in a way. I'll hold you responsible for Rodriguez. Get out of here and take him with you."

"Fate," said Beechy, so softly that Morton barely heard it and was startled to find Beechy close beside him.

"Cracked ice!" boomed a voice, and there was Towner on the other side. "March!"

The door was shut with ceremony upon Morton and Rodriguez.

"That's that," said Beechy. "Give me a cigarette."

"The Ambassador!" said John Moore.

When at last they put the cake before Ruth and told her to cut it, she turned to John. "Couldn't you cut it?"

"He's not the bride!"

The girl lifted the knife and made one incision. "There," she sighed. "I've cut it."

John Moore arose quickly. "You fellows send this wonderful cake on to us in New York, will you? This girl is dead tired. And we have to pack yet and make the train."

"You make a train!" scoffed Beechy in scorn. "You can't make a train; we'll put you on that train!"

Back again in the room where Ruth had dressed in her bridal gown, John closed the door. "Now, young lady, you are going to take a nap until train time. Not a word from you. You're dead tired. I can see it."

"Give that to me now, please. That's not a gown; that's a negligee. Do you think you can really do all this if I sleep?"

"You are not to think about it. I told you! Lie down and I'll cover you up. I'll wake you in time. There! That's better than a damp saddle in a smoky little cave, isn't it?"

"That was a dear little cave," Ruth smiled up at him sleepily from her pillow.

John Moore drew back. "Yes," he said quietly.

But the girl was fast asleep. Slowly the long train began to move.

The man and girl on the observation platform leaned over the rail for the last handshakes.

"Good-bye, Ruth! If you need us let us know!"

"If this Plute beats you or anything—"

"We'll see you in the spring!"

"Good-bye, Joe!"

"Adios, Senorita-Senor!"

"Hasta Luego, Ambassador!"

"Good-bye!"

Past the station and the little park where the pepper trees stirred in the night wind and a little Mexican dove, crooning, called to them from the shadows, "Who's that? Who's that? Who's that?"

The girl caught her breath and swayed nearer to the man beside her. His arm went around her.

"Hear that?" he asked. "Who's that? He's an impertinent bird and persistent. He has to know! He's calling to you. Why don't you answer him? Who are you anyway?

INSANE MAN SHOOT FAMILY-KILLS SELF

Wife Killed, One Son Mortally Hurt, Second Son
Attacked—Third Runs From House In
South Orange, N. J.

SOUTH ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 31.—Apparently suddenly insane, Frederick Sanborne, 49, today shot and killed his wife, Maude, mortally wounded his son Jack, 10, attacked his oldest son, Frederick, Jr., and then killed himself.

Another son, Albert, escaped his father by running from the Sanborne home, where the mad attack was staged.

Sanborne first shot the boy Jack, the bullet entering the left temple, and the boy later was reported dying at the Orange Memorial Hospital.

He then turned the gun on his wife, who has been ill. He struck her with a hammer and then attacked Frederick with the hammer. An attempt to shoot Frederick failed when the revolver missed fire. He then killed himself.

NON-PARTISAN TAX REDUCTION SYSTEM IS NOW ABANDONED

Party Leaders Cling To
Own Programs For
Tax Slice

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Hope of inaugurating a non-partisan tax reduction program in the new congress was virtually abandoned by party leaders as the house ways and means committee began public hearings on the proposed measure today.

Republican and Democratic spokesmen clung tenaciously to their own programs, with the difference in the amounts of the proposed reductions seemingly too great to be reconciled without a bitter political struggle.

The Republican program, based upon the advice of the treasury and the plans of congressional leaders, indicated an ultimate figure of $200,000,000 to $300,000,000, with corporations receiving the greatest benefit.

The Democratic program agreed upon by Senator Simmons, North Carolina, and Rep. Garner, Texas, ranking minority member of the senate and house fiscal committees, still calls for a tax cut of $400,000,000 to $500,000,000 despite the pessimistic estimates of the treasury.

President Coolidge and Secretary of Treasury Mellon have already condemned these figures, declaring that any such decrease in the levies at this time will result in a deficit and higher rates within the next two years. Rep. Garner, frankly distrusting the treasury estimates, was prepared to grill Secretary Mellon before the committee.

More than a score of national organizations, constituting an open but powerful lobby, will send representatives before the committee in its ten days of open hearings. The plan of house leaders is to report the tax bill soon after congress meets on December 1, pass it by Christmas and send it to the senate so that it may become a law by March 15. This would make possible the application of reductions to this year's taxes.

WEEK END TRAFFIC TAKES EIGHT DEATHS

CLEVELAND, Oct. 31.—Northern Ohio's week end traffic toll reached eight when an Erie passenger train struck an automobile at Burbank, south of Lodi, late yesterday, killing four members of one family.

The dead: Mrs. Willard Workman, 35, of Burbank; Alie Workman, 13, a son; Hazel Workman, 8, a daughter; and Willard Workman, Jr., 2, a son. Willard Workman, the father, and another daughter, Gypsy, 3, are in a hospital at Lodi.

BULLET IN BRAIN FATAL IN 11 YEARS

LANSING, Mich., Oct. 31.—Mrs. Erma Lake, 26, is dead as a result of a bullet lodging in her brain eleven years ago.

When she was fifteen, a revolver she was cleaning was discharged and the bullet entered her head, severing an optic nerve and causing total blindness. Surgeons feared an operation would prove fatal and the bullet remained.

Recently she went to the hospital, suffering with bronchial pneumonia. A coughing spell freed the bullet, causing it to press against a vital spot. Death followed.

ATTEMPT TO MURDER GREEK PRESIDENT FAILS OF PURPOSE

Admiral Expected To Improve From Slight
Wound

ATHENS, Oct. 31.—A censorship was imposed upon the radical press today following an attempt to assassinate Admiral Kondouriotis, president of Greece, by 25-year-old Zanos Goussios, a former waiter.

The bullet inflicted only a scalp wound and the president is improving in the hospital. Unless a toxic condition develops he will soon be able to leave.

The police are still investigating to determine if Goussios is a communist. The prisoner, during a second examination today, denied any connection, with the communist party. He said he was out of work, hungry and despondent and tried to kill Kondouriotis in sheer desperation.

The communist party repudiated Goussios.

Recently the Greek government refused to give the Greek communists permission to send a delegation to Moscow to participate in the tenth anniversary of the founding of the Soviet government.

The fugitive was being returned to New Orleans by automobile under heavy guard, it was said.

MANY HONORS GIVEN AMERICAN FLYERS BY FRENCH PEOPLE

Will Sign Gold Book—
Miss Elder Buys
New Frocks

PARIS, Oct. 31.—After the first few days of being wildly acclaimed by Paris and visiting a few of the world famous wonders of Paris, Miss Ruth Elder and George Haldeman today continued the elaborate program prepared for their brief stay at the French capital.

Today's official program, however, was scheduled to be light, as Paris was enjoying a holiday. Both Ruth and Haldeman will speak over the radio through the radio institute of Sorbonne University and in the evening will be guests at a dinner given at the home of Minister Bokanowski.

The French people, it was revealed today, are planning many honors for the fliers. The French Senate is preparing to receive them Thursday and the city of Paris wants to have them sign the gold book Friday and receive gold medals.

An official decoration for Miss Elder was asked by Commandant Weiss, noted French ace. The Archives De La Parole, or Sorbonne University, has asked for a permanent wax record of the vibrations of Miss Elder's voice, to be placed in the archives where the voices of many famous men and women are being preserved.

Ruth and Haldeman spent yesterday wandering about the boulevards and observing Paris in Sunday dress. Miss Elder was dressed in her latest French purchase, a striking black jersey kasha coat with a gray fox fur at the bottom. Her dress was a two piece creation of a black and white jersey blouse and black jersey kasha skirt. On her head was a jaunty black velour hat.

Last night the fliers attended the casino De paris where they witnessed the performance of the Dolly Sisters. Ruth and Haldeman occupied a box as the guests of members of the French Aero Club.

"MONEY LOVE" STARTS TODAY

Beatrice Burton, whose name has come to be synonymous with good newspaper literature, has written another of her interesting serial stories for The Xenia Gazette.

The story, "Money Love," is starting today on page eight as "The Lady Called Fate" comes to an interesting close. Succeeding and generous installments of the new story will be published daily.

Miss Burton seems to have that magic gift that enables her to write the sort of serial stories that newspaper readers like. She has probably been the most popular author whose serial stories have appeared in this paper for some time and for that reason, it was with pleasure that the management was able to renew the relationship with this, her latest serial.

Readers will not have to be reminded that it was Beatrice Burton who wrote "Honey Lou," "Her Man," "The Hollywood Girl" and "Sally's Shoulders," all of which were published in this paper. Her new story offers an attractive appeal for these cooler nights and those who have read it, say it is one of her best.

RESCUED TELL THRILLING YARN OF BATTLE FOR LIVES AT SEA

Nine Men Saved By Liner When Schooner Founders
—Take To Single Life Boat For
Four Days

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Four days and nights—a nightmare of toil—at the pumps of their doomed schooner and then seven back-breaking days and nights in a tiny open boat, battling constantly against seepage from leaky seams, their bodies aching from salt water boils, thirst and hunger and the jabbering prayers of a negro cook babbling ceaselessly in their ears. Like a page out of fiction, there came the story today of nine men of the sea who were brought into port by their rescuers, Captain Jacobus De Koning and his crew of the liner Volendam.

Captain William D. Potter of Cambridge, leader of the rescued crew was still tired today. "I guess I'll be tired for some time yet," he said. His quiet mate, George Bradell, regarded his venture with true salt water optimism. "Well, it wasn't any picnic."

Capt. Potter's schooner Horatio G. Foss, of Boston foundered October 22 after twelve days of battling storm swept seas, enroute from Philadelphia to Martinique with a cargo of coal. The captain ordered his seven men and the cook to the auxiliary motor boat, but it was necessary to throw the motor overboard in order to make room for the crew. Only after four laborious days at the schooner's pumps was the order for abandonment given.

Then began the gruelling hours in the 22-foot open boat striving to reach Bermuda, 200 miles away. The boat had sprung its seams upon touching water and constant bailing was necessary. They toiled for seven days and nights, only to sight Bermuda and then be swept thirty-five miles back into the heaving sea by a gathering storm.

A sixty mile gale was raging; the negro cook, Joseph Notice, whose prayers were flaying the raw nerves of the men, rose hysterically as the storm whirled the tiny craft about, Capt. Potter said, and it was only his sternest intervention that kept his men from throwing the negro overboard, he added.

"Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has determined that for the present at least he will not identify himself with any commercial undertaking," Guggenheim said.

GOVERNMENT ADDS FINISHING TOUCHES TO OIL PROSECUTION

Former Senator on Stand
At Sinclair-Fall
Trial

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The finishing touches on the government's picture of fraud and corruption incident to the leasing of Teapot Dome naval oil reserve to Harry F. Sinclair by former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall were to be applied by Owen J. Roberts, Federal Prosecutor, when court convened in the conspiracy trial today.

With former Senator Charles S. Thomas, of Colorado, on the witness stand, Roberts endeavored to show the jury that Harry F. Sinclair was actively identified with the defunct Continental Trading Company, Ltd., of Canada, a morning glory concern that blossomed for a single deal.

Establishments in the minds of the jury that Sinclair was so identified is all-important to the government's case, for previously it had been shown that $250,500 in liberty bonds from the bank account of the continental found their way into Fall's hands. The government contends Sinclair directed this transfer and holds that the transaction was a bribe to induce the former cabinet officer to lease Teapot Dome.

Thomas was the attorney of the late Col. A. E. Humphreys, of Texas, who sold the Continental 33,000,000 barrels of oil. This oil was promptly re-sold to the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Company at a profit of two and five cents a barrel. The Continental not putting up a cent of cash, but taking $3,000,000 in profits, Thomas will tell the jury about the conference at which the Humphreys contract was arranged. Present were Sinclair, Col. Robert Stewart, of the Standard Oil of Indiana; H. M. Blackmer, of the Midwest Refining Company, and James H. Prairie Oil and Gas Company.

Blackmer, according to Thomas, suggested the oil be bought in the name of the Continental Trading Company, but the attorney refused because he had never heard of such a concern. Thereupon, Sinclair, Stewart and O'Neil, in writing, guaranteed the contract. It is the signature of Sinclair, plus Thomas' remembrance of conversation at the conference, that Roberts is depending upon to link the defendant definitely with the Continental.

Paul Retherford, 9, was killed when struck by a car driven by Charles Martin.

Edwin Butler, 50, seated himself on the railing of canal bridge, and then slashed his throat with a razor, his body falling into the stream. Ill health was assigned as the cause of his act.

FACTORY EMPLOYE BELIEVED KILLED BY THREE BANDITS

CRESTLINE, O., Oct. 31.—County authorities here today were seeking two men and a woman, who operated as bandits here Saturday night, in connection with the mysterious murder of Roy Heckler, 48, a factory employee, whose body was found Sunday morning in the Sandusky River near the Big Four Railroad viaduct here.

Heckler, according to Coroner George Mannahaidt, had been beaten on the head with a blackjack or club, his skull having been fractured and numerous bruises inflicted upon his head, before he fell or was thrown into the water. His automobile was found parked nearby.

The theory that he had been robbed and slain by the bandit trio developed after Ernest Eckert reported to police that he was held up and beaten Saturday night by two men and a woman near the spot where Heckler's body was found.

The killing of Heckler was the fourth murder reported in Crestline this year, and none of the cases has been solved. His mother, his widow and two children survive Heckler.

BELIEVE AIR PILOT FAINTED AND PLANE CRASH KILLED FOUR

Veteran Flyer Dies With
Crew When Big Plane
Falls

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Belief that pilot Leroy Thompson, 28, of Waterbury, Conn., fainted at the controls of the new Fairchild monoplane which crashed with a death toll of four near New Brunswick, N. J., yesterday, was expressed today by officials of the Colonial Air Transportation, owners of the ship.

The tragedy occurred but a short distance from the spot where a Reynolds airway plane had crashed seven persons to their deaths on September 12.

Thompson, pilot of the big ship which plunged earthward yesterday, was a veteran in the air. He also was manager of the New York branch of the Colonial company. With him in death went his fiancée, Elizabeth McGowen, 25, Newark school teacher.

Investigation was said to have revealed that the motor of the plane was roaring smoothly up to the moment that it was plunged into the earth. Witnesses questioned today said not until the plane was a few yards from the earth, did they realize it was out of control. Structurally and from a motor standpoint, it seemed to be functioning properly.

The other two victims of the crash were Wesley Hubbell, 27, Hackensack, N. J., and George Haubner, 28, Hillside, N. J., both telephone company employees.

MANAGER POSITIVE SUSPECT ASSISTED IN DARING HOLD-UP

Partly Identified By
Ralph Chambliss—
Returned Sunday

Roy Bartlett, 25, Clarksburg, W. Va., was positively identified Monday morning by J. A. Wipert, manager of The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., branch store at Main and West Sts., as one of two youthful bandits who held up and robbed the store the night of October 22.

Wipert and his wife were forced at the point of revolvers to hand over the day's receipts, the robbers timing the coup at the exact hour the store was closing for the night and gaining entrance on the pretext of making a purchase.

Bartlett was also partly identified by Ralph Chambliss, Cincinnati Ave., as one of the three robbers who attempted, unsuccessfully, to hold him up earlier the same evening on W. Second St. He was half convinced Bartlett was the leader of the trio.

Fred O. Leurance, Pennsylvania Railroad detective, further complicated Bartlett's identity with the hold-ups Monday when he remembered having seen him here early on the night in question.

Bartlett was returned to Xenia from Clarksburg early Sunday night by Sheriff Ohmer Tate and Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman to face a charge of robbery, filed against him in connection with the grocery store hold-up.

He did not oppose his extradition to Ohio but local officers had made the trip, prepared for such an emergency, by bringing themselves with the necessary requisition papers.

Sheriff Tate obtained Governor Vic Donahey's signature to the papers last Friday, and returning to Xenia, took a train to Charleston, W. Va., accompanied by Shagin. The Ohio governor's requisition was honored by the governor of West Virginia at Charleston last Saturday.

Bartlett maintains he is innocent of both crimes. Police say he claims his ability to prove that he left the city about 8:15 that evening, or before the hold-ups took place.

Bartlett and E. H. Sayre, 26, Clarksburg, W. Va., held as a suspect, became acquainted in the state penitentiary at Moundsville, W. Va., where both served terms, the former for shooting a colored man who had attacked a white girl and the latter for holdup, the records showed. Released from prison about the same time, they became companions on a motor trip West.

They passed through Xenia en route home on the day the local robberies took place. A third man had been picked up along the road. Both suspects profess ignorance of his name.

Bartlett told police the three became separated in Xenia. He said he left the city for his home before the time the hold-ups were reported to have taken place.

Bartlett was transferred from the County Jail to Police Headquarters Monday morning to face victims of the two hold-ups.

Police are uncertain whether he will be arraigned on the robbery charge before Mayor John W. Prugh Monday or Tuesday. Disposition of the case of the second suspect is also uncertain.

New Boy Scout Cabin Ready For Occupancy

DREAM REALIZED BY SCOUTS WHEN CABIN IN PARK COMPLETED

Old Scouts And Many Volunteers Get Credit For Building

The new Boy Scout cabin, located on a two-acre site, which extends the length of Shawnee Park at the northeast end, is now completed and ready for occupancy, it is announced.

Construction work was started April 4 and the building was completed October 25. It is a frame structure twenty by thirty feet, well lighted and heated by a huge, rugged fireplace.

Erection of the building, which will be used as headquarters by the three local Scout troops, was made possible through organization of the Old Scouts Association a year ago and by Xenians who contributed to the Old Scout drive for funds.

Each person contributing $1 or more, became a member of this organization, and helped to make the cabin a reality.

Many individuals were active in aiding in the work of building the cabin. The building was erected through the efforts of Deputy Scout Commissioner R. H. Kingsbury, S. N. McClellan, Scoutmaster J. J. Stout and Edwin Woodward, assisted by Dr. B. R. McClellan, Asst. Price John Baldwin, Walter Smith, Arthur Miller, Fred Hornick, James Orr, Karl Knisley, J. H. Nagley, E. C. Hamlin, Robert Dornier, Scoutmaster Ernest Blackburn and others.

Kingsbury is scoutmaster of Troop No. 41, Stout heads Troop No. 43 and Blackburn leads Troop No. 45.

Scouts also wish to thank Roy Croker, who loaned his trucks for use in the work. The Stout Coal Co. and Arthur Miller also assisted in hauling stone for the big fireplace and chimney to the building site. Other firms which assisted in making construction of the cabin possible, include: The Wilson Engineering and Contracting Co.; Greene County Lumber Co.; McDowell and Torrence Lumber Co.; Ervin Milling Co.; and Dodge Marble Co.

Earl Short gave the use of his concrete mixer to the boys while the foundation was being poured. The Dayton Power and Light Co. is credited with a share in the project for furnishing a special line, strung to the cabin to supply electricity for lighting.

All work was voluntary on the part of skilled and unskilled individuals, who worked under the capable direction of S. N. McClellan and R. H. Kingsbury. Kingsbury and McClellan spent practically every evening and holidays during the summer months in order that the cabin could be completed for use this fall.

Regular meetings of local Scout troops are now being held in the new cabin. The boys are enthusiastic over the building and appreciate the efforts of all individuals who assisted in the work.

There are now three troops of Boy Scouts in Xenia. The order in Xenia was first organized in April, 1915 with Earl Spahr as Scoutmaster and Karl Ervin and Leigh Nisbet as assistants. Since this time, the Scouts have participated in every civic activity in which they have been needed.

During the World War, their activities included the Liberty Loan drive and savings stamp sales. Medals and bars for loan work were awarded eleven boys in the troop.

In 1918 a second troop was formed under the direction of Eagle Scout W. R. Jobe. This troop has J. J. Stout as its present leader and has come out strongly for athletics under its able leader, Robert Adair.

Troop No. 45, organized in 1927, is in its infancy in point of years but is steadily growing under Ernest Blackburn, of the Lutheran Church.

Present Scout enrollment in Xenia is seventy-five with 100 the prospect for another year.

"So it can readily be seen that Scouting is on the map in Xenia and with a definite place for the activities available, the continued growth is assured," asserts Deputy Commissioner Kingsbury.

BRITISH AIR FORCE START FLYING BOAT STATION ON THAMES

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The Air Ministry is about to set up a commercial flying boat station on the Thames, in conjunction with the chief aviation companies.

The first service instituted will be one of the passenger flying boats across the North Sea from London to Hamburg and Copenhagen. This will be an arrangement between the Imperial Airways of England and the German Luft-Hansa.

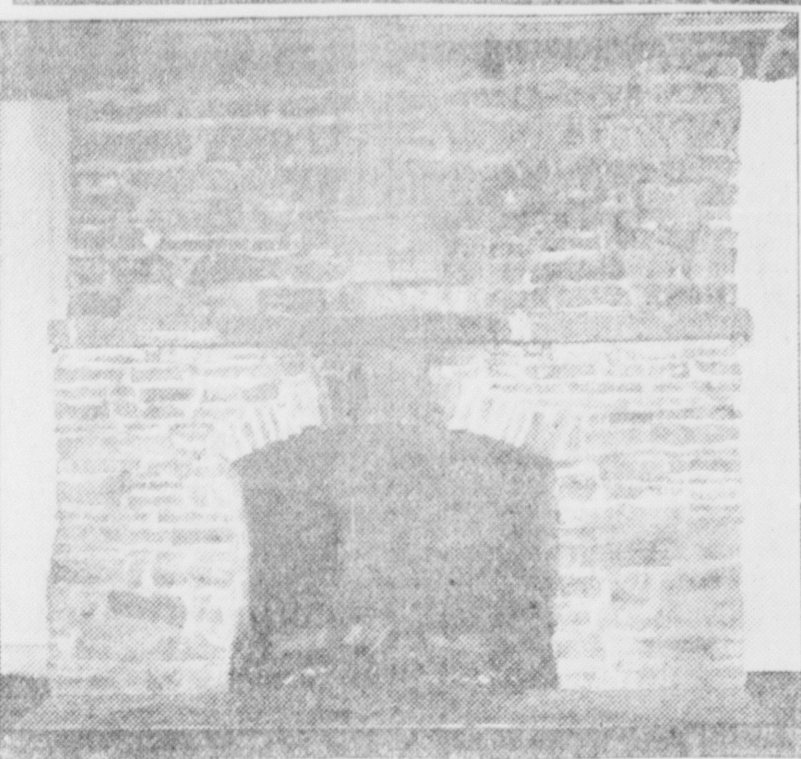

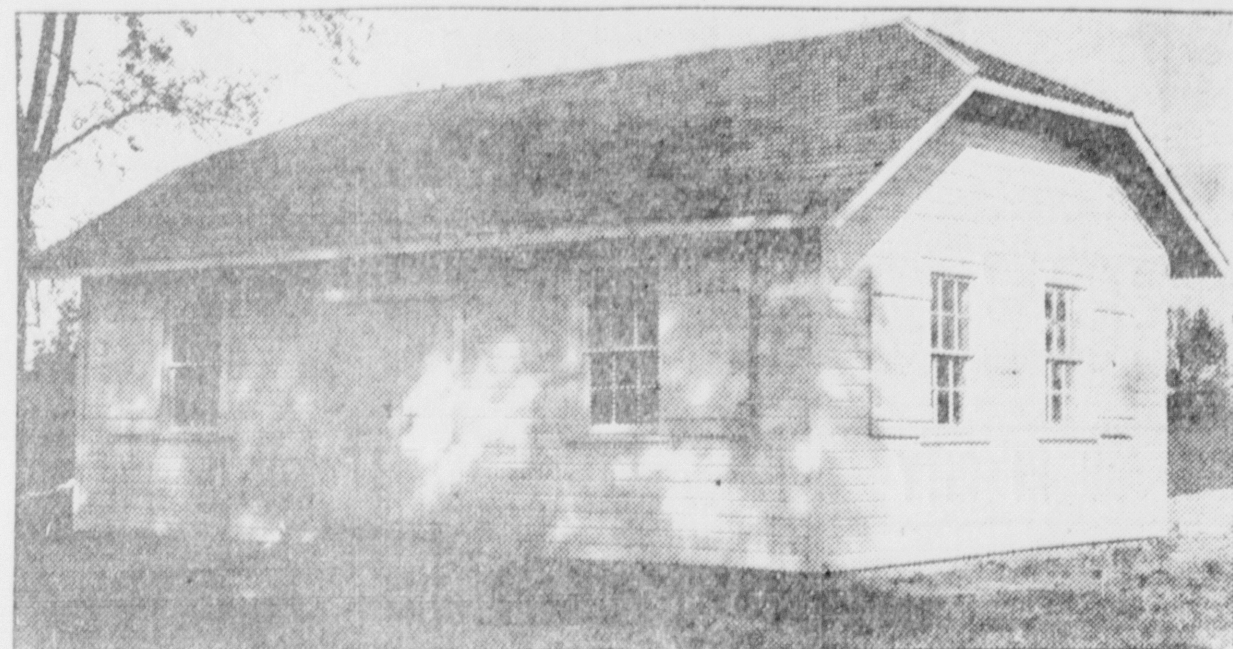

The service will be a daily one, and the type of machine likely to be used is a Dornier-Rolls-Royce all metal flying boat seating about twenty passengers.

Experts are convinced of the value of the flying boat for commercial use and are of the opinion that many business men would welcome the proposed service as a speedy method of reaching Germany and Denmark.

URBANA, O., Oct. 31.—Mrs. Bezie Gillespie, of Columbus, today began her eighth month at the home of her parents here, with a bullet in her brain, while surgeons puzzle over the strange case. She was accidentally shot by her husband, and has been paralyzed and unable to move ever since. Surgeons say an operation to remove the bullet would instantly kill her.

Stout, who leads one of the local troops, who has played an active part in the progress of the organization. ELKS' FAIR DRAWS MANY CELEBRATORS SATURDAY NIGHT

Miss Evelyn Ary, 206 W. Main St., won the grand prize of $15 and Arthur Hyman, E. Market St., won the second prize of $10 Saturday night, when the closing celebration of the Elks' Charity Fair was held.

A floor lamp and smoking set, offered as prizes at the fair, will be given away later.

The biggest crowd of the fair filled the Elks' Club, Second and Whiteman Sts., Saturday night. The amusement booths attracted several hundred people, and the dance floor was filled during the entire evening. Officers of the Elks were unable to give an estimate of the amount raised through the fair, but enough is thought to have been realized to furnish a nice Christmas treat to children of the city, this year.

Several hundred youngsters took advantage of "Kiddies' Day" at the fair Saturday afternoon. Games and amusements were furnished for the children and three prizes, a pair of shoes each, were given away. Refreshments of ice cream, candy, etc., were furnished by the lodge for the boys and girls.

GERMANY LEADING NATIONS IN SUICIDES STATISTICS PROVE

BERLIN, Oct. 31.—Of all European nations Hungarians are most, Greeks least inclined to throw away their lives, according to the latest suicide statistics. Germany, which so far was on the top of the list, ranks second in the new statistics, right ahead of the Czechoslovak Republic.

With the exception of Ireland and Italy, statistics show that people in Northern Europe, heavy thinkers and, as a rule, pessimists, figure most prominently in the list of self-murderers, while the natives of the sunny South seem to cling to their lives.

In the following list the total of suicides in proportion to 10,000 of population is annually: Hungary 2.7; Germany 2.6; Czechoslovakia 2.5; Switzerland 2.4; Austria 2.4; Freestate Dantzig 2.3.

In proportion to 100,000 of population the annual total of suicides in other European countries is as follows: Sweden 1.6; Denmark 1.5; Italy 1.4; Lithuania 1.3; Spain 1.2; Ireland 1.1; Greece 1.0.

The latter list proves that suicides are almost unknown in a certain number of European countries.

CULDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germ.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

Farm Notes

CROPS DECREASE

Less corn, oats, cotton, apples, peaches, tobacco, and sugar beets; more wheat, barley, rye, buckwheat, flax, tame hay, white potatoes, grapes, and sweet potatoes.

That is how production estimates as of early October compare with last year for the United States on the more important farm products, according to the monthly "Economic Information Letter" sent by the rural economics department of the Ohio State University to Ohio farmers who are cooperating with that department in keeping farm records, or the like.

Chief among the changes between September and October production estimates are these: Drop in oats production estimates from a crop of 4.7 per cent more than last year, to one 3.6 per cent less than last year; increase in corn crop estimates of 146 million bushels, due to warm weather in September thereby raising total crop estimate to 2,603 million bushels, as compared with a five-year average (1922-26) of 2,767 million bushels. The Ohio corn crop between September 1 and October 1 gained, according to the estimates, nine million bushels, making a prospective crop of 107 million bushels, as compared with a five-year average of 145 million bushels.

Private estimates of the carry-over of old corn, Ohio economists add, indicate about seventy million bushels less than last year.

RESISTS ARREST BY OFFICER; IS GIVEN HEAVY FINE MONDAY

John Niceley, 43, this city, was fined $100 and costs on a charge of drunk and disorderly conduct when he pleaded guilty before Mayor John W. Prugh Monday morning. It constituted his fourth offense, police say.

Niceley resisted an attempt by Patrolman J. E. Craig to place him under arrest late Sunday night and the officer was compelled to use his mace to subdue him.

The officer had been assigned to answer a complaint of a woman that Niceley had been drinking heavily and was forcing his attentions upon her against her wishes.

Craig asserted Niceley struck at him and the officer retaliated by hitting him on the head with his club. Niceley immediately tried to escape but was overtaken by Craig after a short chase and taken to Police Headquarters.

Niceley was not seriously hurt by the blow but a physician was summoned to bandage his head.

EXTRA POLICEMAN BOTH FAKE AND REAL

Three extra patrolmen patrolled the streets of the city Saturday night, assigned by Police Chief M. E. Graham for special duty in connection with the Halloween festivities in Xenia.

The extra officers were Jesse Dorton, Alphonsa Sanders, colored, and William Ringer.

Chief Graham also granted permission to several celebrators to impersonate policemen by masquerading in officer's uniforms and so more cops were in evidence than for many years.

Chief Graham consented to applications for permission to wear officer's uniforms, believing the apparent large number of patrolmen would have a psychological effect on mischievous children.

GLIB TONGUE AND REAL WORK

Just as prosperity and development of a country depend upon the home, so does the home depend upon operating industries, steady payrolls and sound government policies.

One of the main reasons for the good times which we have enjoyed in this country has been the willingness of capital and labor to appreciate the advantages and the necessity for maintaining, building up and encouraging the home markets.

Capital realizes that well paid and contented labor has the greatest purchasing power. It has abandoned the old notion that labor is a commodity to be purchased at the lowest price. It has adopted the idea of reducing waste, both human and material.

Labor on its part has appreciated the value of these changes. It understands that only by increased production can it secure permanently increased pay.

Neither labor nor industrial leaders in other parts of the world seem to have been able to understand these fundamental ideas which since the war, have helped strengthen the social, industrial and financial structure of the United States.

These remarkable changes have been economic and not political. They were brought about by scientific and practical men who understood the human element in production, as well as the physical machinery and markets of the world.

The problems of the world today are not political but economic. The type of administrator and executive needed in public affairs should not be taken from the ranks of those whose sole experience has been in politics and whose principal stock in trade is a glib tongue and a superficial understanding of the technique of government. The ideal administrator is a man well grounded in the history of governments. In addition, he should have an understanding of industrial problems, a broad vision in regard to economics and a knowledge of the world and its peoples. He should know the needs of the world from the standpoint of its furnishing markets for the products of American farms and industries.

In other words, the ideal administrator and executive in our public affairs is the thinker and the doer, and not merely the orator and spellbinder who has too often led political parties in days gone by.

AMUSEMENTS AND DOCTORS

"At least ten per cent of whatever income one has should be invested in pleasure," advises Elizabeth Marbury, widely known writer.

Here is some more of the advice given by this "wise woman" to working men and women, and particularly to those who sacrifice all to their jobs.

"It often costs money but amusements are not as expensive as doctors.

"How many old fashioned people refuse to spend on pleasures. They pinch and save and believe that to go to the movies, to the theatre or to listen to music is a waste of their hard earned pennies. This is bad reasoning. Relaxation is the oil which makes the wheels of life go round.

"Some enjoyment is necessary. It is the relief from tension. It is as necessary to the brain as bread is to the body.

"Nothing ages one so fast as to live in dullness. One's vitality becomes sapped, one's outlook becomes warped. Doing anything is better than doing nothing."

The Way of the World

STILL LEARNING

We are still learning about fuel. The industrial world hasn't found out nearly all it needs to know, and some day will know, about fuel. Less coal and more oil has been the later rule in industry. Now come experiments in burning powdered coal instead of oil under boilers. Experiments are successful and the cost of fuel is greatly reduced. The most important and interesting thing about the industrial revolution is that it keeps right on "revoluting."

A POOR EXCUSE

When visitors in Russia comment on the poverty and general wretchedness of conditions in that country, they are told that "you should have seen Russia under the czar."

That's the kind of excuse many of us are prone to make for ourselves whenever we are in error. We seek for comfort in the fact that we are better than somebody else or that the conditions which we have brought about are not as bad as they might be. That's a lazy excuse. It shows no ambition and no heart for a better day. We ought always to be comparing our work with what it might be, with the ideal. The acceptance of the second best, because it is not so bad as something else, is a poor, weak gesture.

KEEPING THE MACHINE GOING

Seven years ago the U. S. treasury department estimated that we, the people of this country, spent 23 billion dollars a year on sports, amusements, and luxuries. The amount is doubtless greater now. Your first thought might be that this is a lot of waste. The fact is that our habit of freely spending for this sort of thing is one of the reasons for our prosperity. We keep the big manufacturing and selling machine going by our luxurious habits. We keep a multitude of work. We provide a continuance of prosperity.

WHY NOT DO IT?

Ninety per cent of 1,000 business leaders of this country have approved a new calendar. The year would consist of 13 four-week months, with an extra day left over annually and two extra days in leap year. Every week day would fall on the same date.

And why not? We muddle along with an antiquated calendar when there are good reasons for systematizing things in a convenient manner. The reason we do nothing about it is the reason that governs us in most other matters of suggested improvement. We just simply hate initial inconvenience. We would rather let well enough alone than go through the necessary motions of adjusting ourselves to something better. And that's why human progress is so slow.

The Daybook

OF A

New Yorker

By Burton Rascoe

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—One of the most novel studios in New York is about to open to the public. It is in the rear of a bookshop at 65 Fourth avenue, opposite Wanamaker's store. The interior of the studio has been constructed almost entirely out of discarded packing cases, but some very beautiful cabinet making and wood carving has been put into the raw wood by the artist whose workshop it is. This young man is a Russian, Ben Coffet, is a sculptor who has worked for years at the prosaic trade of being a hatter, by day, and who has studied and toiled by night at his wood carvings and modeling. Now at last he has a studio of his own, self made, and a showing there one of the most interesting art exhibitions in New York. He has about twelve interesting pieces on display, both in bronze and marble.

Panorama of New York. The tiny, tiny, tiny, like yellow butter-fies, alighting in the window of Galvin's florist above the Ritz. The brass fellow who tries to sell every man who is escorting a woman to the theatre "red roses for the lady." He is always trailing along Forty-fourth street, both before and after the performance. What an old-fashioned idea, what an irritating hang-over from a romantic past, that of weighing a woman down with thorny flowers just before she takes her seat in the theatre. If I were a woman, I should be annoyed with any stupid male who would add further to life's complications. The joyous hand Raymond Hitchcock receives, after a seemingly long absence from Broadway, when he appears as the amiable comedian in "Just Fancy" with Joseph Santley and Ivy Sawyer. In a certain speech he explains he is deeply interested in the young Santleys (they are producing the piece) because they met and married in his company, more than ten years ago. He says that Ivy Sawyer's mother had permitted her to come to America under his guardianship because she didn't know him very well. Hitchcock seems to me one of the most likable of comedians. He is droll in an intelligent manner. He is an incurable libber, and most of the time has the other members of the cast weak with giggles not written in by the authors of the script.

Howard Shelley, who does a Broadway publicity racket, and might reasonably be expected to take his New York as it comes, quite without criticism or question, is developing what amounts almost to a phobia on the question of skyscrapers and the terrific growth of crowded life in the city, generally. He says he didn't mind the occasional skyscraper in the Times Square and Grand Central district, but now that every corner blooms with a towering structure, the city is beginning to get on his nerves. He is oppressed by the feeling of being crowded down into nothingness by these great, hulking, unfeeling buildings. I sympathize with him. Sometimes, when I find myself swept along Broadway, in that hectic after-theatre rush that is nothing short of Bedlam, I am hurried with the same stifling sensation. There are just a few too many people in New York.

The new vehicular tunnel, about to be opened, leading from downtown New York to Jersey, under the North River, is no doubt a great institution, but if ever I need to travel Jerseyward, the ferryboat will carry me. The tunnel may be quicker and more efficient, and certainly it is a triumph of engineering, but I am all for the blowing breezes and the vicarious scents of shipping.

Does Man Choose the Girl Nearest to Him?

I derive much quiet amusement from reading marriage license lists published in New York and other city newspapers, and I never fail to find that a high percentage of those about to wed have been living near each other. Indeed, many couples give the same street address—probably the same apartment building or boarding place.

When a man is in a marrying mood he is likely to pick on the first girl he sees. If there isn't a reasonably attractive one in the same house, he may meet her next door or up the street. A painstaking statistician collected facts a few years ago to show that a man is more likely to marry a girl across the street than up the street. The idea is that they are naturally more likely to reach a nodding or chatting basis if they live where the houses face each other.

Still another man compiled battling average which shows that when a couple have been attending a co-educational college get married, there is better than an even chance that their last names begin with the same letter, or at least with letters that adjoin in the alphabet.

The explanation is simple enough. In many colleges students are seated in alphabetical order and those who sit side by side after day, have a good opportunity to get acquainted. Of course they meet plenty of others; but there is something about sitting alongside of a person who common interest such as a college

NEWS COMMENT AND VIEWS

THE GREAT HUMAN PUZZLE

I Have Said in My Heart

By IDAH McGLONE GIBSON BRIDES

I am taking Time by the forelock today because I want to say a few words to the girl who is going to be married this month. I believe I have a right to do so, because I was married just after I left school, and left a very wonderful home with practically no training, in becoming the wife of a poor man. Yet I lived with the same husband until he stepped through the door beyond mortal ken.

While a happy marriage does not entirely depend upon the wife, for the first three years it is usually up to the girl.

Men have very hazy ideas about our sex, because their minds are taken up so much with themselves and the great work of providing a living that they have no time and less inclination to sit down and talk things over with their wives. They do their work of every day and expect the girls they have married to do the same.

George Bernard Shaw, in his caustic manner, once said that a man's business is to get money enough to enable him to have the man, and a woman's business is to get married.

Agreeing with Mr. Shaw, one may go even a little farther. It is almost always the woman's business to make the marriage stick; consequently, if a girl is determined to be, a helpmate to her husband.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

The Other Side

A short time ago I published a letter in this column under the caption, "Should She Confess?" It was from a girl who had committed the social sin, repented and was in love with a young man who begged her to marry him. The question asked was, should she confess her fault?

The following letter is from a girl whose boy friend has committed the same sin. What should be her attitude?

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I have been going with a boy for some time, and think quite a lot of him, but this boy is in trouble with a girl several years younger than he is, and he is under a large bond, and will probably go to the pen."

"Now, Mrs. Lee, do you think that my going with him will cause people to talk about me, but do you suppose he loves this other girl? Sometimes I think that he does, and I know that this little girl still loves him."

"TROUBLED JANE" Your letter is a little ambiguous, Jane. Why doesn't this boy marry the girl he got into trouble with?

class that makes it easy to form a habit. I haven't tried to prove anything here. Yet the facts do indicate that marriage is still a little like drawing a number out of a hat. It depends largely on chance. Possibly it would be far better if people did more shopping about before making up their minds.

band in all his undertakings, a man will soon come to accept her at her own valuation and regard as most necessary to his welfare. The duties of wedded life loom much greater than his joys or pleasures. So, my dear girl, who is to be married this fall, do not put aside the duties which you have covenanted to perform, for your husband will early accept you as a possession, something to be played with and laid aside at will, and the little rift has come within the lute.

If you are suspicious and fault-finding you will soon learn that your husband is untruthful, for no man lives who will not shirk the nagging of a fretful wife at any cost, and I, for one, do not blame him.

Above all else, do not tell your husband's faults even to your mother. As long as you live with a man you two are one, and when you discover his shortcomings to someone you uncover yours as well.

"Why should I make all the sacrifice?" you may ask. There is no reason at all why you should sacrifice yourself, my dear, unless you want to take upon yourself the holy names of wife and mother, and you must remember that romantic love means very little in married life if it is not combined with the utmost forbearance and tolerance.

And so, dear girl who is to be married this fall, instead of thinking of your lovely wedding, of your trousseau and of the joys that are to be yours, sit down for a little and ask yourself "What will I give in return? Am I ready to do my share?"

Memo: Be big enough to put selfishness before self and duty before your own egotistic selfish pleasures.

ble? Especially if, as you suggest, he may love her? Why does he have to go to prison? I cannot see how your reputation can suffer if you stand by him in his trouble, if he is repentant and anxious to make amends. As the other girl loves him, wouldn't it be the better way to encourage what love he has for her, and try to influence him to do the right thing by her, putting aside your own feelings in the matter? How would you feel if you were in her place?

It is sad for Daughter when Mother and she do not like the same boy. Maggie complains: "Dear Mrs. Lee: I am 19, and a high school graduate. I have been going off and on, with a boy, almost three years. My parents never have liked this boy, and they haven't any reason for it. "My mother never has consented for me to write to him. She says letters will get you in trouble. Do you think she is treating me right? This boy and I have now "busted" up, as he says we couldn't go on that way; that he loved me and always would, but I was just as much to blame as he. He has asked me several times to marry him, but I have never given him a definite answer. What is your advice?"

MAGGIE. It is certainly an uncomfortable position for you, loving a boy of whom your parents do not approve. It seems to me it's up to

Household Hints

BY MRS. MARY MORTON

Most of us speak reproachfully of the housewife who serves her family a delicatessen meal. It is necessary once in awhile however, and if it is tastefully served and the articles well chosen, it may not be such a bad meal after all. Here is suggested a menu the different foods for which may be purchased on the way home from business or club.

Sliced Ham Potato Salad
Baked Beans or Spaghetti
Pickles Chili Sauce
Baked Apples or Canned Fruit
Cookies Coffee

Today's Recipes
To prepare the meal in record time the beans or spaghetti should be opened and the contents put on to heat. The coffee should be made and put on to "perk" or boil. The baked apples or canned fruit—if your delicatessen does not have the apples—should be chilled in the ice box, the meat arranged on a platter and surrounded by the salad and pickles. Set the table, cut the bread and serve.

Suggestions
Marmalade Toast
Take slices of bread, spread with butter and orange and lemon marmalade. Put together and toast on both sides.

Obstinate Stopper
To remove an obstinate stopper from a glass bottle dip a piece of wooden cloth into boiling water and wrap it tightly about the neck of the bottle. In a few minutes the stopper can be removed.

Mincing Suet
One can mince a pound of suet in a few minutes if the following method is adopted: Pick all the fat from the suet, then sprinkle with flour on a baking board and roll flat. Lift the flattened piece of suet and rub it between floured hands and it will break down into powder.

Removing Varnish, Paint
Varnish and paint stains in coarse fabrics may be removed by first saturating them with turpentine and then washing.

Hungarian Goulash
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)

One pound beef, one pound veal, cut in squares. Four onions, fry brown, take out and put in meat and brown. Put in casserole with two teaspoons paprika, salt to taste, water to cover. Cook one and one-half hours. Four potatoes, four carrots, two turnips, fry in grease until partly done, add to casserole. Two green peppers, chopped, three tablespoons flour dissolved in water. Add water to cover, cook one hour more.

King Vidor, the director who started the film world with "The Big Parade," will direct Marion Davies in her next.

the young man to prove that he is worthy. He should have a frank talk with your parents—if he really loves you and wants to marry you—find out what are their objections to him, and ask them if you can prove he is worthy. Of course, it may be possible that your parents have grounds for their objection and realize the boy would never make you a good husband. Try to find out the truth before you break your heart over him.

Behind The Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—No body possibly could have imagined, as lately as a month ago, that Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas would be mentioned seriously as presidential possibility.

Almost anybody, in jotting down a list of Republican eligibles, would have included Curtis' name—but only as a theoretical possibility. He's his party's leader in the upper house of congress—very prominent. He's consulted, on everything. He'd have been included as an "honorary" possibility, but he certainly wouldn't have been considered an "active" one—until so much talk of a "western man" started.

Today—well, without going so far as to say he's pronounced possibility even yet, he's jumped a good many grades upward on the possibility roll.

The idea is, if this "western revolt" really is as formidable as some folks think it is, maybe Curtis could be fixed up as a compromise candidate, and a regular party split avoided.

He's a dived-in-the-wool "organization" politician. For "regularity" he can't be beaten. He's of the "old guard," first, last and forever. He's a conservative. "Safe and sane" would be his middle name, if he had any. A radical streak in Curtis' make-up is unthinkable.

Yet he's a westerner—Kansas is "out west"—there's no getting away from it.

Curtis also has done a thing or two that even the western insurgents had to look on with a certain amount of favor.

The "old guard," if it remembers, never was strong for President Coolidge, but simply made the best of him because it couldn't help it. He stuck in "that New England crowd," which the "old guard" always resented—and put the skids under, too, as often as possible, as witness the fact that Coolidge's buddy, William M. Butler, invariably was found "holding the sack" whenever the president tried to do anything for him.

In a quiet way, a number of those old "wheel horses" have spiked a good many Coolidge policies in the last three years, and

Curtis has done his fair share of it, which, of course, was highly gratifying to the "anti-everything" element.

Again, in 1926, Curtis and a few other old-timers, going out of their home states to be re-elected, handled their campaigns in a way to amount to open repudiation of almost everything Coolidge-istic.

Curtis, for instance, declared for the McNary-Haugen brand of farm relief, in defiance of the president and the "down-easters" generally.

All this went a long distance toward taking the curse off his ultra-conservatism, as the political insurgents regard him. They still feel that he's pretty backward—and yet, perhaps, an individual who can be negotiated with.

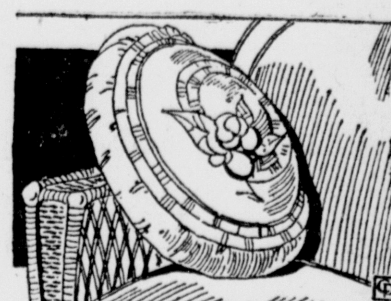

At any rate, when the western "radicals" began to throw a scare into the conservatives' rank and one of the latter suggested—

"You fellows know, of course, that we couldn't stand for Norris any more than you'd agree to J. P. Morgan, but how about Curtis?"—the "radicals" attitude was—

"H-m-m-m—well—it's worth thinking about."

To be sure, at 67, Curtis is too old, but nobody pays any attention to that this campaign.

He was quite a strong vice presidential candidate in 1924. He isn't nominated in 1928, by a long shot, but his prospect's 20 per cent better than it was last September.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

What Constitutes the Beautiful Back and How to Acquire It

Your backbone is truly the "backbone of beauty"—it is the basis of a beautiful figure, and the great nerve center that radiates energy to every part of your body. I am not going to deal very much today with the flesh and skin on your back, but rather on the structure itself.

I wish you could get a mental picture of your backbone. You should look carefully at a medical chart or physical culture chart which shows you just how the spine should look. Then call that picture to mind whenever you are attempting to improve your own figure.

The spinal column is a beautiful thing in itself, made of a sequence of little round bones, loosely joined with muscular tissue, almost like a string of beads. It is not meant to be perfectly straight. One of the things artists love is the gentle curving of the spinal column. There should be three shallow curves to the back, none ever more than an inch deep. They are forward at the neck, backward at the shoulders, and forward again at the waistline, and out again over sacrum.

If the spine is allowed to curve too much at any one of these places the whole body is thrown out of its normal, healthful and beautiful alignment. Usually where the curve goes too deep at one of the points, a corresponding curvature appears at one or both of the others in order to bring the body into balance. So when you see a woman whose head is carried too far forward, usually her shoulder line is back too far and she has to deep a "lumbar" curve, or depression at the waistline. As the first two curves mentioned were really taken up in the talks I gave on the neck and shoulders, I am going to lay special stress today on the lumbar curves.

When you have a depression in the lumbar region of your back, you usually have a doubly difficult job in keeping your abdomen flat. One of the best exercises for lessening the lumbar curve is this: Bend forward as far as you can, without bending your knees, and allow your arms to fall loosely in front of you. Feel as if you were arching your back and relax in every other part of your body, then raise up again slowly with your attention concentrated on the middle of your back, keeping it free from the inward curve, to an upright position. Make an effort to hold this position while you are walking or working or sitting down. If you have any pain in this region, or any particular difficulty, you should lose no time seeing your physician. Osteopathy is often effective in such cases.

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent.

On the Back of a Bucking Bat
No sooner had Peter taken his seat upon her soft, fat, furry back than Mrs. Flittermouse took to her wings, and so suddenly that the boy very nearly lost his balance.

Whish! Off to the right, Swish! To the left! Flip, flap! Up into the air! Flop! Down toward earth again. Twich! A sudden stop half way between tree tops and the ground, and now, but for a moment only, right straight ahead!

"I've heard about a bucking bronco, but I'll bet a cookie he is no harder to ride than a flying Bat. It's lucky for me that her wings are so wide or I'd never keep my seat," muttered Peter, as Mrs. Flittermouse jerked her way through the moonlit sky. "Good gracious, how ever does Mrs. Flittermouse know where she is going? I can't notice that the lady keeps to any course like my bird steeds did! I should think by this time, with all her twos and turns and stops, she would have forgotten where she started for. Hey! Look out! Tree ahead!"

Peter cried out in alarm and braced himself for a crash against the tree's trunk. But nothing happened. So Peter straightened up and heaved a sigh of relief, as Mrs. Flittermouse skimmed by, as white birds without so much as touching it with the tip of her wing, although between it and the bark one could scarcely have squeezed a feather.

"Don't see how you managed that, little lady," cried the boy. "Good work, but I thought you were going to dash out your brains against that tree! Oooh!"

HEY! LOOK OUT! TREE AHEAD!

In spite of the first escape Peter couldn't see how Mrs. Flittermouse could possibly avoid being caught in the prickly branch of a wild pear tree just ahead. He closed his eyes. Poor Mrs. Flittermouse! If nothing worse happened she was going to have a great gap in her left wing. He waited for a cry of pain. None came. Mrs. Flittermouse never even uttered a squeak. Peter opened his eyes. The prickly pear tree was behind them. His clever aeroplane had taken a spiral dip, and just in time.

The Theater

What of the "double" and his or her ultimate success or failure? The most famous "double" of all is Ramon Novarro. Ramon started doubling for Rudy Valentino and when Rex Ingram had his first quarrel with Rudy back in the old Metro days, he threatened to make a star out of Ramon and succeeded brilliantly.

But naught was said of Ramon's when he joined the Paramount executive staff. He stepped forward to take a bow as Gilbert Roland, the dashing lover of "Camille." Gilbert also spent some time doubling for another Gilbert, first name John.

Then came a third, Don Alvarado stepping from the ranks of the long shots to the closeups and better pay checks. Don has doubled for nearly all the "great lovers," Ronald Colman included. The newest of the boys is Charles Delaney. DeMille has just put Charlie under a long time contract, and his first picture will be "The Main Event." Charlie has been a lot of stars in the dangerous distance.

Paramount has purchased Clara Bow's contract with Benjamin Schulberg, one of its chief executives, for a reported sum of $150,000, says "Photoplay." Mr. Schulberg had Miss Bow under contract when he joined the Paramount executive staff. Authentic news from Fox Films has it that F. W. Murnau, director of "Sunrise" will travel with one of the large circus outfits to gather notes for his next production, "The Four Devils," which Berthold Viertel and Carl Mayer are adapting from Herman Bang's novel.

Harold Lloyd has finished his work around New York and has returned to Hollywood. A few more scenes on his set and he will have completed his new comedy.

Songs of a Housewife

BY MARJORIE KRAVITZ
THE ORDER MAN

HE murmurs in my flattered ear,
"I know that you'll appreciate
Our first new peas. Of course,
they're high,
But what of that? The season's late."

"I've saved a gorgeous steak for you."
He whispers. I had planned on rice,
With peppers, to economize!
I stammer, hypnotized, "How nice!"

He compliments me on my taste.
One day he sold me caviar.
"If it had only filled us up,"
The family groaned, "We wouldn't care!"

My food bills leave me breathless, tho'
Extravagance I try to ban.
Oh, how I wish my grocery
Would hire a tongue-tied order man!
